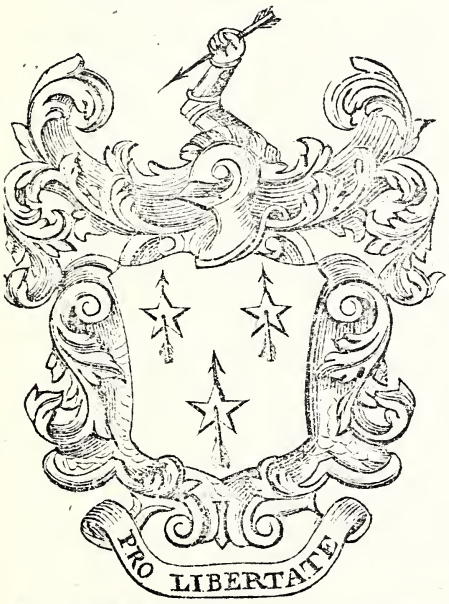
BIOGRAPHICAL AND GENEALOGICAL SKETCH OF DAVID PROVOOST, OF NEW AMSTERDAM, AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

BY EDWIN R. PURPLE.

IN Dr. Berrian's Historical Sketch of Trinity Church (p. 197) is a brief memoir of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Samuel Provoost, taken from the Churchman; from it we extract the following:



JOHN PROVOOST

"The family from which Bishop Provoost was descended, from the earliest period to which it can be traced (1550), was French. In some of the old books which came down to him, there is the Provoost coat of arms, with the motto. Pro libertate. It has sometimes been supposed that the Bishop adopted the motto at the time when he took a decided part in favor of the liberties of this country; but this is a mistake, as it was undoubtedly borne by the family in remote times.

"The first of the name of whom any trace can be found, was a William Provoost, who resided in Paris at the time of the massacre of St. Bartholomew [Aug. 24, 1572]. The family were Huguenots, and this William Provoost, with another member of the same, made their escape from the murderers employed on that occasion. He married a lady by the name of Tam Waart, with whom, in 1634, he came to New York, then New Amsterdam."

The foregoing statement, so far as it relates to the antiquity of the coat of arms and the Huguenot origin of the family, is doubtless correct; * but we have no evidence that the William Provoost, here spoken of, and his wife Tam Waart, ever came to New Amsterdam.

Two of the name, David and Johannes Provoost, were here at an early date; the first settled here, while the second was for many years a resident of Fort Orange (Albany). (See Note a.)

1. DAVID PROVOOST[1] came from Holland to New Amsterdam before April, 1639, perhaps with Gov. Kieft and his company in March, 1638. The first notice we find of him is on the 28th of April, 1639, at which date he brings suit against Harmen Dircksen, "for loss of service as an indented laborer"; judgment is given the defendant for his wages, and for plaintiff for amount expended on defendant's account in Holland, and on board ship." In 1639 he was an original grantee of a parcel of land on the present west side of Pearl near Fulton Street, and where, for some time, he resided.[2] The same year he was engaged in trade, which was his principal occupation, when not in the service of the government. He was in the employ of the Dutch West-India Company here for many years, his first official position being that of Commissary of provisions and Tobacco Inspector, in January, 1640. In April, 1642, he was placed in charge of Fort Good Hope, at Hartford, Conn., where the Dutch maintained against the English, for a number of years, a separate and independent government. While here, in Sept., 1646, an Indian captive having become liable to public punishment, fled from her English master at Hartford, and was protected by Provoost in the Dutch Fort. A requisition having been made by her master and the magistrates, for her person, and denied—the Hartford authorities despatched the Watch of the town to recover her by force. This invasion, of what he deemed his just jurisdiction, was successfully resisted by Provoost, "who drawes and breakes his rapier vpon their weapons," and then withdrew into the fort, where he "defended himself with impunity." "Had he bene slaine," writes the Connecticut Commissioners, in complaining of the occurrence to Gov. Kieft, "in this proude affront, his bloud had beene vpon his owne head." Kieft, however, warmly approved the spirited conduct of his agent, telling the Commissioners of the Connecticut and New Haven colonies, then met at the Red Mounte, or New Haven, "that watches are appointed for the defence of townes against the violence of enimies, and not for the hinderinge of friends returne to their owne houses," and to prevent mischief, "it were good to commit such a trust to skilfull men, and not to ignorant boyes."

It is apparent that he was both an able and resolute defender of the rights of his superiors, for, upon another occasion while here, with four of his men, he forcibly seized some of the Dutch horses, which had been impounded "for damage done in the English corne," assaulting and striking the Connecticut man, "who legally sought justice, and, in a hostile way, took away his teame and laden."[3]

In June, 1647, he was succeeded by Gysbert Opdyck—former commissary at Fort Good Hope in 1638,—and returned to New Amsterdam, his name appearing in the list of school-masters, in November of that year.[4] In May, 1648, the General Court at Hartford having been informed that he and other Dutchmen had sold powder and shot to the Indians, they ordered, that if upon examination of witnesses [ex parte] this should appear, the penalties of the laws of the Commonwealth should be enforced against them, to which, in case of not subjecting themselves, "they shall be shipped for Ingland and sent to the Parliment."[1] Whether guilty or not, Provoost, unawed by the court, and fearless of personal danger, continued to visit the Connecticut settlements.

He was the bearer of a letter, dated at Wight [Gardiner's Island, L. I.], April 14, 1649, from Lion Gardiner to John Winthrop, Jr., at Nameag [New London, Conn.]. Gardiner sent with his letter a bushel of hay-seed to Winthrop, and says: "This bearers, beinge our frends, desired me to write to you that they might leave their canow with you in safety, whilst they goe to Mohegan, which I desier, and you shall command me as much in the like respect, etc." He was, doubtless, at this time on a trading expedition, as at Mohegan [subsequently in the town of Norwich, Conn.] Jonathan Brewster had then set up a trading house on his farm there, and on what is still called Brewster's Neck.[2] His name is at the head of the list, Feb. 2, 1652, of the last board of "Nine Men," "who were," says Dr. O'Calaghan, "the immediate precursors of the Burgomasters and Schepens, and of a municipal form of government in the city of New Amsterdam." They were the chosen representatives of the entire commonalty, and it was declared in their commissions that what "they did should be the act of the whole people;"[3] they held their sessions in David Provoost's school-room. He was the second notary in the city, Sept. 16, 1652, and was succeeded, April 13, 1655, by Johannes de Decker. To these different vocations, he added that of attorney and counsellor, in which capacity we frequently find him attending to suits before the Burgomasters and Schepens. On the 23d May, 1653, Gov. Stuyvesant and Council appointed him, with Johannes De La Montagne and Govert Loockermans, commissioner, to attend the investigation of an alleged conspiracy of the Dutch and Indians against the English. The New England Commissioners—with whom it was intended they should act—were informed by Gov. Stuyvesant, that these gentlemen "all joyntly in some measure understand the Duch, English, and Indian speeches, excase any Duchman. Englishman. or native, might be found that would stand to the accusation," and who could be particularly examined by them, in reference thereto, according to the custom and laws of New Netherland.[4] He was sergeant in one of the companies of the Burgher Corps of New Amsterdam in 1653, and April, 1654, was made the first separate schout or sheriff of Breuckelen, and removed to Long Island. In May, 1655, he is styled "Schout, or temporary Secretary" to the three Dutch towns, Breuckelen. Amersfoort [Flatlands], and Midwout [Flatbush], all of which were included in the Breuckelen District. This position he held until his death, and was succeeded by Peter Tonneman, Jan. 25, 1656.[5] He died Jan., 1656, leaving widow Grietje or Margaret Gillis; her name is variously written in the Records, Jellis, Jelisen, Yilis, and Yelsij. She was probably married in Holland, and came here with her husband; was the daughter of Gillis Jansen Verbrugge and Barbara Schut. In March, 1643, David Provoost gave to Gillis Jansen Verbrugge a power of attorney, to receive an inheritance accruing to his wife by the decease of

In the same street was his Store-house, and Bolting, and Baking house. In June, 1722, Gov. Burnet recommended him to the Lords of Trade as one of the Councellors of New York, and in July, 1723, he was appointed to that office, holding it until his death in January, 1741.[1] Will dated Dec. 27, 1740 ; proven Jan. 8, 1741 ; names wife Mary, and following children :

1. ANNA MARIA VAN HORNE, bap. Jan. 28, 1702 ; m.—, 1721, Gov. William Burnet, son of Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury. He was b. at the Hague, March, 1688, and derived his first name from William, Prince of Orange, who stood sponsor for him in baptism ; was Governor of the Colonies of New York and New Jersey from Sept. 17, 1720, to April 15, 1728. The last year of his life he was Governor of the Province of Massachusetts Bay, and died at Boston, Sept. 7, 1729, after a short illness. His death was attributed to his taking cold from the overturning of his carriage upon the causeway at Cambridge, the tide being high, and he falling into the water.[2] In his will, dated Dec. 6, 1727, he directs that his body "be buried at the Chapel of the Fort of New York, near to my dearest wife Mary and one of my children, in a vault prepared for them, in case I die in the Province of New York. But if I die elsewhere, in the nearest church or burying ground, or in the sea, if I should die there, well knowing that all places are alike to God's All-Seeing Eye;" names his late brother Gilbert : brother-in-law David Mitchel and sister Mary his wife ; directs that his son Gilbert (by his first wife) be sent, within six months after his decease, over to England to the care and guardianship of his said brother and sister Mitchel ; names also "children William, Mary,* and Thomas by late wife, Mary Van Horne." Appoints Abraham Van Horne and his wife Mary Executors of his will and Guardians of his three youngest children. Only two of these children were living, Dec. 27, 1740, the date of Abraham Van Horne's will ; their names are not given. Mrs. Burnet d. late in the year 1727.

46a. viii. ANGENIETJE.[3] bap. Feb. 10, 1697.

47. DAVID, JR.[3] (12) bap. Jan. 23, 1670. He was engaged in trade as a merchant and was prominent for many years in the public service of the city and province of New York. On the 29th of Sept., 1697, he was returned Alderman of the Dock Ward, and on the 29th Sept., 1698, was elected by the Board of Aldermen, Chamberlain and Treasurer of the city. He took the oath of office as Mayor of New York, Oct. 14, 1699; while Mayor he acted as Deputy Recorder from Sept. 18 to Sept. 29, 1700, and was succeeded in the Mayoralty by Capt. Isaac De Reimer. He was Alderman again from 1700–1 to 1708 inclusive.[1] In 1700 he was Captain of the 2d Company of Foot, in the Regiment of which Abraham De Peyster was Colonel. He was a member of the General Assembly—to which he was elected in place of [Dr.] John Kerfbyl deceased—from May, 1699, to May 3, 1702, and from July 2, 1711 (when he is styled Major), to Dec. 12, 1712. He next appears June 5, 1716, in the Assembly (then as "Lieut. Col. David Provoost"), and remained a member of that body until his death; he is first noticed as "Colonel" Dec. 1, 1718.[2] He was a member of the Council, 1709–10, Lord Lovelace, Lieut. Gov. Ingoldesby, and Gov. Hunter, then being at the head of the government.

In July, 1710, "having unwarily confessed judgement for four thousand pounds," though the real debt was not above four hundred, at the suit of Abraham De Peyster, one of the Trustees of his step-children, he was detained a close prisoner, for nearly two years, in custody of the Sheriff. On the 2d of July 1711, he addressed a letter to the Speaker of the Assembly, reciting the fact of his election as one of the Representatives for the city and county of New York, and praying the privileges of the House for his enlargement—which was read on the second day following; at the same time, a petition was presented to the House from Cornelia, John and Mary Spratt, children of John Spratt deceased, setting forth that David Provoost, Esq., their father-in-law, was detained in custody on their behalf, "he having not paid their portions," and praying the House would consider their case, "they being orphans." This matter is referred to by Gov. Hunter in a message to the Assembly, Nov. 2, 1711, as a dispute between Provoost and the De Peysters, and in his letter to the Lords of Trade, May 7, 1711, as a case requiring the intervention of a Court of Chancery, "there being no relief at common law." The difficulty, however, was adjusted before April 30, 1712, on which day the Assembly ordered "That Col. Cortlandt and Lieut. John Schuyler do wait on his Excellancy, with Major Provoost, and desire he may take the Oaths and sign the Test appointed by Law; which was done accordingly."

Col. Provoost was selected, July 22, 1724, to examine and compare with Dr. Colden (who had been appointed by the Council) the Acts of the

Dec. 19, 1683, dau. of Gerrit Corneliszen Van Echtsveen and Wyntje Stoutenburg.* He was Assistant Alderman of the North Ward, 1708–9 and 1709–10. In July, 1720, was owner with others of the Privateer Hunter, which was charged with taking prizes unlawfully. On the 17th June, 1722, Gov. Burnet recommended him as "an eminent merchant of this city" to a seat in His Majesty's Council in New York, and July, 1723, he was appointed a member of that body, in which he served until August, 1732. About this time he removed to New Jersey, and soon after was appointed a member of the Council of that Province.[1] (His family was there as early as 1726, with the exception of his wife, who was prob. not living.) From this position, for non-attendance, he (on the 7th July), and Cornelius Van Horne, with other of their associates, in the summer of 1740, were suspended by Gov. Lewis Morris. "It was not," writes Gov. Morris to the Lords of Trade, "from any prejudice to me that they [Van Horne and Provoost] did not attend; nor was it to gratify any resentment of mine that they were suspended, they being both my good friends; and the brother of Van Horne being before yt marryed to my grand-daughter by whom he has several children."[2]

The following notice of her death appeared in the New York Gazette, etc., Dec. 11, 1749: "On Friday last departed this Life, Mrs. Johannah Provoost, wife of Mr. David Provoost of this city, merchant, aged 43 years; who is to be interred this day, in the vault of Mr. Nicholas Bayard, at his country place. She was a very loving Wife, tender mother, good mistress, and always charitable to the poor; a pleasant companion, and belov'd by every one that knew her. She died a good Christian, worthy of example; has left four children, three sons and one daughter; and this day [?] been married 26 years."—He was for more than half a century an active successful merchant in New York. During the French war he owned with Henry Holland, William Kelly and John Leake the privateer Johnson (Gen'l. ?) which captured a number of French vessels with valuable cargoes. In these enterprises, trading, loaning money, and by judicious investments in real estate, he became very wealthy and acquired the name of "Ready Money Provoost." In 1742 he purchased ninety acres of land on the east river, known before the revolution as the "Louvre," but in later years as the Jones' Wood Farm. Here he built an elegant country mansion, which was standing in 57th street as late, we believe, as 1857, and erected a substantial family vault, in which the remains of his wife were deposited, and where, upon his death, he was laid by her side; the site of this tomb was on the block between Avenue A and the East River, and 71st and 72d streets. For many years special reservation was made of this spot by his heirs, in conveying the property, but improvements in that part of the city finally swept it away in 1857. When demolished there was found the remains of three or four coffins; the lid of one measured over seven feet in length; the bones of a child, an adult female and one or two vertebræ, which must have belonged to a man much above the ordinary size, without doubt to David Provoost. A view of the tomb and mansion with an account of the former, to which we are indebted, will be found in Valentine's Manual for 1858.—He d. Oct. 19, 1781, none of his children surviving him. —Issue:

pal Church in 1766. He m. at Cambridge, June 8, 1766, Maria, dau. of Thomas Bousfield, Esq.,* of Lake Lands, near Cork, Ireland. Returned to New York, and became assistant minister of Trinity Church in December, 1766, a connection which was dissolved in 1770. The reasons given for the severance of this connection were: First, that a portion of his hearers charged him with not being sufficiently evangelical in his preaching; and second, his views of the contest then just opening between the Colonies and Mother Country were not in accordance with those of the majority of his parish; the last probably was the correct reason for his withdrawal. In the latter part of 1770, or early the next year, he removed to a small farm he purchased at East Camp, now in Columbia Co., N. Y. While here he was proposed as a delegate to the Provincial Congress, which he declined, as also an invitation to become chaplain of the Convention which met at Kingston in 1777, and formed the first Constitution of the State of New York. He deemed it nowise derogatory to his clerical profession to bear arms (though not very successfully) against the enemies of his country, and after the British had burned Esopus, in October, 1777, he joined his neighbors in pursuit of the English soldiers. They found themselves, however, in a situation where concealment became necessary for the safety of their lives, or at least security from capture, and discretion prevailing, they escaped the peril. He was also offered while here, the rectorship of several parishes, among them, St. Michael's Church, at Charleston, and King's Chapel, Boston, where his politics were rather a recommendation; but these were uniformly declined "on the ground that he was unwilling to appear to avail himself of his politics for acting towards his brethren, who differed from him, in a manner that might be imputed to mercenary views, and an ungenerous desire of rising on their ruin." After the close of the war, a new vestry of Trinity Church was chosen, who, early in 1784, unanimously elected Mr. Provoost their Rector, which he accepted, and soon after removed to the city. On the 13th of June, 1786, he was elected Bishop of New York, and three weeks after had the degree of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him by the University of Pennsylvania. In November following, he proceeded to England in company with Dr. William White, Bishop of Pennsylvania, where, on the 4th Feb., 1787, at Lambeth Palace, both were consecrated to the Episcopate, and returned to New York on the 8th April. He was appointed a Regent of the University of the State in Nov., 1784; elected Chaplain of Congress in Nov., 1785, and of the United States Senate in 1789; and was one of the Trustees of Columbia College, appointed by Act of the Legislature, April 13, 1787, reviving the original charter, etc., of that institution. His wife died after a lingering illness, in August, 1799, which, with other domestic bereavements, and impaired health, induced him, on the 8th of Sept., 1800, to resign the Rectorship of Trinity, and his Bishopric, Sept. 3, 1801. He was subject to apoplectic attacks, in one of which he died suddenly, Sept. 6, 1815.

In person, he was above medium height, somewhat inclined to corpulency, and had a fine imposing appearance. His face was round and full, with a strong intelligent cast, well fitted to command attention and respect; his manners were graceful, social, and self-possessed; a fine classical scholar and thoroughly versed in ecclesiastical history and church polity.

* This name is incorrectly given Benjamin Bousfield in Alden's Epitaphs, vol. 5, p. 272, and in N. Y. Geneal. and Biog. Record, vol. 4, p. 180.

He was distinguished for his public spirit and patriotism, and the liberality with which he dispensed his means to the poor. His death was a marked event in the intellectual and social circles of New York.—(Berrian's Hist. Sketch of Trinity Church; Sprague's Annals of the Am. Epis. Pulpit.)—Issue:

NOTES.

(a) 1. JOHANNES PROVOOST was probably the eldest son * of David,[1] and born in Holland; Assistant Commissary of Provisions, etc., at New Amsterdam in 1653; went to Fort Orange in 1656, was Notary Public there from that time to Nov., 1664, when he became Secretary of Albany until August, 1665, and again from Oct., 1673, to Aug., 1675, and Sheriff in 1678. In July, 1668, he conveys to his brother-in-law Harmen Vedder, who proposed to return to Holland, a sum of money due him from the West India Company in Holland, "earned here in the character of assistant in their honors' service." He m. Sara Staets [Staats], who was prob. his first wife, and dau. prob. of Maj. Abram Staats,† Surgeon 1642, and Trader at Rensselaerswyck, 1657, "had also a considerable bouwery, besides pursuing the practice of his profession," and was for many years a skipper on the North River. He m. again in New York, June 25, 1685, Sara Webbers, widow of Laurens Van der Spiegel; they made a joint will Sept. 3, 1685; Letters of Administration were granted on her estate, Dec. 23, 1685. He m. again, July 18, 1687, Anna Mauritz, widow of Domine Wilhelmus Van Nieuwenhuysen.

After leaving Albany he was engaged in trade as a merchant in New York. He was an active supporter of Leisler's government, a member of his council, and commissioned in March, 1690, with Johannes De Bruyn and Jacob Milborne, to take command of the forces raised in New York and adjacent counties, and proceed to Albany, to take control of affairs there, and possession of the fort.

He suffered imprisonment in jail, for his connection with Leisler, as well as loss of a portion of his estate; upon his release, in 1691, he went to the Hague with his brother-in-law, Jacob Mauritz, from which place with others, on the 15th of Oct., 1691, they addressed a memorial to their Majesties William and Mary, in behalf of the adherents of Leisler, then imprisoned in New York. He returned to New York before 1695, and dying intestate, "having while he lived and at the time of his death, Goods, Chatels and Credits in divers places within this Province,"—Letters of Administration on his estate were granted March 28, 1706, to Maurice and William Newenhusen [Van Nieuwenhuysen], his "principal creditors."    6. ANNATJE NERBERY, bap. March 20, 1709.

A Johannes Provoost, Jr., appears in a list of people "yt went up to Albany" from New York in October, 1690.—(Doc. Hist. of N. Y., vol. 2, p. 120.) August 25, 1696, a Johannes Provoost was lately deceased there, and the sheriff was ordered to sell his goods and "pay his debts so far as it will goe." In the Inventory made, "there was a gunn left in pawn for fourteen shillings in rume for the army, which ye sheriffe has redeemed and taken in his custody, two old coats, a pr breeches, an old broken axe, a leather strap, to be exposed to sale as above."—(Munsell's Annals of Albany, vol. 3., p. 15.) Was not this the son of the Secretary of Albany and the Johannes Provoost, who "was called Schoonzoon of Elizabeth Bancker, in her inventory made in 1693?"—See Pearson's First Settlers of Albany, p. 88.—One of the same name, in 1684, was master of sloop Unity, plying between New York and Albany.—(Valentine's Manual, 1866, p. 787.)

(b) DR. JOHANNES KERFBYL, "Physician and Chirurgeon," came to New York with wife Catharine Rugh (and prob. son Johannes) from Holland, about 1685. On the 1st of Feb., 1688, they executed a joint will reciprocally making the survivor the only and absolute heir of all the estate of the other; they also confirmed the "Indenture of contract of marriage," made by them in Amsterdam, Holland, October 28, 1664, before the Public Notary, Jan Hendricksen Van Louven, her cousin and guardian. In 1686 they were members of the Dutch Church in New York, and lived on the west side of Broad street. Dr. Kerfbyl graduated and received his degree at the University of Leyden, and is represented to have been a very learned, honest man. He was appointed member of the Council of New York, October 25, 1698; it does not appear, however, that he ever took part in the deliberations of that body. He was a member, for a brief period, of the General Assembly, that convened March 2, 1699; he died late in April or early in May the same year. His wife survived him, and with Simon Kerfbyl, "in Amsterdam," was witness at baptism, Sept. 29, 1706, of Anna Valentina, dau. of Johannes and Margaret (Provoost) Kerfbyl, which is the last account we find of her.

(c) MARIA DE PEYSTER, bap. Sept. 7, 1659, was the dau. of Jan and Cornelia (Lubberts) De Peyster,[1] both born in Haerlem (Holland), and m. in New Amsterdam, Dec. 17, 1651. (For account of De Peyster Family see Valentine's Manual, 1861, p. 556.) She m. 1st, May 11, 1686, Paulus Schrick,[2] born at Hartford, Conn., bap. Sept. 2, 1663, son of Paulus Schrick [1] and Maria Verlet (m. Nov. 29, 1658), widow of Johannes Van Beeck. Paulus the elder, styled Honorable, also Free Trader, was a merchant at Hartford, originally from Nourenberg—a man of great wealth and extensively engaged in trade with the Dutch at Fort Orange and New Amsterdam. The son was a prominent merchant in New York.—No issue.

She m. 2d, August 26th, 1687, John Spratt,[1] a native of England, from Wigton. He was a Merchant and Alderman of the Dock Ward, 1688, and 1689–90; one of the Representatives from the City and County of New York, and Speaker of the Assembly, which convened under Leisler's authority in April, 1690. On the 11th Jan., 1690, he was commissioned, with others, to hold a Court of Oyer and Terminer and general jail delivery, at New York, and was again a member of the General Assembly from 1693 to 1695, inclusive.—Issue:

LAST ADDITIONS TO THE HISTORY OF THE WOOLSEY FAMILY.

BY BENJAMIN W. DWIGHT, of Clinton, N. Y.

WHILE the series of articles upon the Woolsey lineage has been in course of publication, quite a number of interesting facts concerning it have come to light which were previously unknown to the writer. Such as have not been already communicated are here presented to view in a final group by themselves. They are as follows:

I.

A brief view of the family history of GEORGE WOOLSEY 3D.

I. GEORGE WOOLSEY 3d, b. probably about 1680, and brother to Rev. Benjamin Woolsey, of Dosoris, L. I., was son of Capt. George Woolsey, Jr., of Jamaica, L. I., b. Oct. 10, 1652, who was son of George Woolsey, the settler, b. in Yarmouth, England, Oct. 27, 1610. He removed from Jamaica, L. I., to Hopewell, N. J., about 1710–12, and settled on a farm of two hundred and eighteen acres (now Pennington, N. J). He d. in 1761–2, æt. prob. about 80. His will was executed Feb. 1. 1761, and proven March 11, 1762. Whom he m. has not been ascertained. He had 5 children.

IV.

THE FAMILY HISTORY OF DR. JAMES COGSWELL AND ABIGAIL LLOYD.

(See No. 64, V., p. 18 of Vol. V. (Jan. 1874).

THERE are said to be some errors in the brief statements made of this family in the few lines given to its history. But what they are: and what truer and fuller account might be given of them the writer has failed to find, although seeking to ascertain. Some other hand must give to their record greater amplitude and completeness if it can.

V.

THE FAMILY RECORD OF RODNEY C. PAINE, OF NILES, MICH., AND MARY ELIZABETH WELLES (DAU. OF JOHN WELLES, OF UTICA, AND SARAH RICE HULBERT).

See No. 138, V., p. 144 of Vol. V. (July 1874).

I. ROBERT PAINE, b. July 23, 1837, d. Sept. 7, 1838.
II. JOHN WELLES PAINE, b. March 11, 1839.
III. ARTHUR PAINE, b. Sept. 22, 1840, d. May 18, 1852.
IV. SARAH ELIZABETH PAINE, b. Aug. 22, 1842, d. April 1, 1843.

IX. ANNIE ELIZABETH PAINE, b. May 1, 1854, d. Jan. 17, 1866.
X. FREDERIC WILLIAM PAINE, b. Sept. 14, 1856.

Here ends the writer's tour of genealogical explorations among the Woolseys. It would be difficult to find, he feels sure, a family anywhere in the land whose history deserves better to be written out in full. May some one of the family arise ere long, who will be both able and willing to do ample justice to its honorable record!

The writer will gladly receive any additional facts which any one may be disposed to communicate, or any corrections of misstatements which he may have unwittingly made, and treasure them carefully for the future use of some earnest self-appointed historian of the Woolseys who may desire them.

NOTES ON BOOKS.

LISTS OF EMIGRANTS TO AMERICA—1600–1700.—Edited by JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN, published in London by CHATTO & WINDUS, and in New York by J. W. BOUTON, 1874. 4to, pp. 580.

We have before us the N. Y. edition of this work, with a much longer description on its title page than is convenient to copy. It is well printed on good paper, and handsomely bound. It has a large index, giving the Christian as well as family names. This is a great convenience. It is the most complete and full publication of the kind we have yet seen. It should be placed as a book of reference in our principal Libraries, and in those of the scientific or professional Genealogists. It is far from being complete or perfect; but what is there human that is? As soon as a better one appears we will welcome it.

"The Academy" review, of 24th October last, contains a criticism of the London edition by Mr. Joseph Lemuel Chester. This was answered by the London publishers in a printed letter addressed to the Editor of that review, dated October 27th, of which a summary was published in the "Academy" of 31st October. In the same paper appeared a letter, dated October 28th, from Mr. W. N. Sainsbury, Editor of the Colonial Calendar of State Papers. These contain several important criticisms and suggestions. We have not space to copy them. Mr. Chester, in the "Academy" of November 7, p. 509, has published his reply to both, and the publishers remain silent unless we deem their advertisements a reply; one of which appeared on the cover of our last number.

There were some publications in Mass. Hist. Collections. Mr. S. G. Drake was entitled to great commendation for his immense labor presented to us in his "Result of Researches," etc. We hope he has sold all his copies and been satisfactorily paid for them. If not, he as a publisher knows how to advertise. We have no notice of any copyright obtained by him. Nearly or quite the whole of his book was published (with additions) in the New England Historic Genealogical Register, and, as we suppose, with his consent. He probably does not object to any re-publication. If he does, he has little remedy. The point of complaint then is, that purchasers of his work or of the N. E. Register, or the like, as to Virginia, who may be induced by the glowing advertisements to purchase this one may be disappointed, and a better work may be superceded or discouraged. The legal answer to this complaint, though true, was referred to on p. 45 of the first Vol. of our RECORD "caveat emptor." The moral question affecting publishers or editors gains little strength by discussion. So long as plunderers fill their pockets by selling their booty they plunder and sell. To prevent the vicious from gaining too much and to favor the purchaser, all are licensed to sell such things as cannot be practically restricted. It is a point of honor in making a publication, to tell fairly, how, and from whom it was copied, and by whom examined. It will be sufficient then to say we are not responsible for the language of the advertisements, and can give no endorsement of Mr. Hotten as an antiquary. It is apparent that the work does not contain several passenger lists published in the New England Register since Mr. Drake's publication. Mr. Sainsbury points out some further omissions. In his printed Colonial Calendar of State papers 1574–1660, p. 112, No. 78, is the entry, "Names of the principal undertakers for the plantation of the Massachusetts Bay, that are themselves gone over with their wives and children." This is omitted. It is not very valuable. We know all the family names it contains. In his same book, page 209, No. 67, is noted a "list of fifty-three passengers besides women and female children, who left Southampton for New England in the "James" of London of 300 tons, William Cooper, Master," which is omitted in this new work. That list was published by Mr. Drake, p. 55, and it contains the names of several known heads of families.—Some new lists and other papers are published, referring chiefly to Virginia and Barbadoes.—They should have been separate. Time will disclose their value.—We think the new publications from Barbadoes are valuable here, although very imperfect.—It will not injure the character of descendants materially, to trace them back to prisoners called "rebels," who were sold by the infamous Jeffries in 1685. We have not discovered any that were important in reference to names or families that we know.

Our lists are still very imperfect, and embrace only a small proportion of the ships and the passengers that came over before 1700. Yet we need already a carefully noted Edition which shall refer to the Genealogical works, in which each passenger on these known lists is identified or claimed. It would be very useful to the Genealogist. One name traced, greatly aids another. It might correct and prevent some erroneous appropriations of common names.

A Genealogy of the Leavenworth Family in the United States, with Historical Introduction, etc. By Elias Warner Leavenworth, LL.D., of Syracuse, N. Y. Syracuse, New York, 1874. 8vo, pp. 376.

During a vacation in Yale College, 1823, the senior year of Elias Warner [6] Leavenworth, an aged uncle of his father communicated many family records, reaching back to Thomas [1] of Woodbury, Conn., the common ancestor of the Leavenworth's in America; and the student then commenced the work of collecting records of the past for the benefit of posterity.

This work, for forty-two years, under the pressure of a multitude of public and private duties, systematically progressed till, in 1865, he resolved to arrange the genealogical items and the biographical sketches for the press. This was completed in eight years.

Fortunately for the family, one of its members, of first-class qualifications and of ample means, has thus for half a century been quietly and judiciously garnering treasures, which will increase in value as future years revolve. The family are enriched not only in the matter, but in the manner of its transmission.

In this work, the children of each family are first compactly clustered, the dates of birth and death being given; and in case of daughters, the names of the marital companions.

When a child subsequently becomes the subject of a more extended sketch, or is viewed as a parent, his or her ancestral line is unmistakably shown by the numeral index figures, —thus avoiding the necessity of any general divisions of the volume into parts embracing successive generations—an arrangement quite admissible, when, as in this book, the descendants of daughters are fully represented to the present time, though bearing names maritally changed.

It is respectfully suggested, that in any new edition the pedegration figures be placed after the Christian name, and before the surname; thus: Dr. David [5] Leavenworth, and not Dr. David Leavenworth. [5]

All readers of the Leavenworth Genealogy will thank the author for his valuable indexes, which, for completeness and simplicity, show practical good sense.

Album of Genealogy and Biography. A Complete and Practical System of Family Registration, and of Preserving Biographical Notes and Memoirs. Designed and Published by J. M. Hawks, M.D. Containing Genealogical and Family Records and Biographical Notes of the Ancestry, and the Cotemporary Relatives and Family of ——— ———. Illustrated with Numerous Autographs, Plans, Photographs and Views. Springfield, Mass.: Printed for the Publisher by Clark W. Bryan & Company, 1874, pp. 230.

This is the full title of a blank book, ready for use, designed as a plain, convenient and practical method of recording family births, marriages and deaths, combining space for the entry of items of personal history and biography, and the insertion of photographic portraits and views. Dr. Hawks, the inventor, has evidently made the subject a matter of study, and has here presented an easy method, and one which by its attractiveness cannot fail to induce the heads of families to attend to the duty of making such records. We cheerfully commend it to the notice of our readers. Copies may be obtained of the inventor, Dr. J. M. Hawks, Hyde Park, Mass.

A Genealogical Sketch of the Family of Field of the West-Riding of Yorkshire, England, and of Flushing and Newtown, in Long Island, N. Y. With a Tabular Pedigree. By Osgood Field, of London, England. Printed for Private Distribution. 1874. 8vo., pp. 14.

This is a reprint in pamphlet form of the article published in the New England Historic Genealogical Register, vol. xvii., 106–112 (1863), to which is appended a paper contributed to the Gentleman's Magazine, and published in that periodical in 1862, on the ancestry of John Field, the Astronomer, of England. The author professes to trace back the lineage of Robert Field, the settler of Flushing, L. I. (1645), through two prior generations to John Feilde, of Horton, in the Parish of Bradford, Yorkshire, living in 1577.

The accompanying Tabular Sheet is a very important and valuable addition to the pamphlet, and embraces a full list of the descendants of the immigrant to the year 1864, besides the descendants of Edward Field, of Horton, the uncle of Robert.

We regret to see that the author still persists in a repetition of the long since exploded errors that the noted Capt. John Underhill, married Elizabeth, a daughter of Robert Field, of Flushing, and that John Bowne, the noted Quaker, married another daughter, Hannah. It is now a well established fact that the wives of these individuals were sisters, and were daughters of Robert Feake, and Elizabeth (Fones) Winthrop, his wife, of Watertown, Mass., subsequently of Greenwich, Conn.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

Cromwell.—(Record, vol. ii., p. 63, 146.)—In Liber 6 of Deeds, p. 99, in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany, N. Y., is a deed from Richard Wood, freeholder of Westchester County, dated Nov. 6, 1676, conveying his "home lot" and other lands at Castle Hill and Cow Neck, Westchester County, to John Cromwell, describing him as "late freeholder of Woodbridge, New Jersey." This is undoubtedly the same John Cromwell referred to by Mr. Bolton in his History of Westchester County, and there claimed to be the son of Col. John Cromwell, who was a son of Sir Oliver Cromwell, the Protector's uncle. Now, the John Cromwell, of Woodbridge, appears to have settled at that place as early as 1670, and Mr. Whitehead, in his History of Perth Amboy (p. 356), states that he came to that place from Newbury, Massachusetts. From the Newbury Records it appears there was a John Cromwell there, born about 1636, who may possibly have been a son of Giles Cromwell of that place, and who married Nov. 2, 1662, Joan Butler.

Who this Giles Cromwell was, or whence his origin, I have been unable to ascertain, but think it not unlikely he may have been of the family of Sir Oliver Cromwell, of Hinchinbrook. Sir Oliver married for his second wife, July 7, 1601, Ann, the widow of Sir Horatio Palavicini, and daughter of Egidius (Giles) Hooftman, of Antwerp. By her he had four children, viz., Giles, born in 1611, but who died at the Hague sometime subsequently to 1632; Oliver, Anna, and Maria. It would seem not unlikely that the Giles Cromwell, of Newbury, may have borne some relationship to this branch of the family, who apparently took up their abode in Holland after their mother's death in 1626. May not these data, while they cast a doubt upon the correctness of Mr. Bolton's statement (there being no other evidence that Col. John Cromwell had a son named John), afford a clue to trace the correct pedigree of the Westchester Cromwells, without destroying the prestige of their Cromwellian descent? J. J. L.

De Sille.—What was the maiden name of the Hon. Nicasius De Sille's first wife? He was Director Stuyvesant's First Councillor from 1653 to 1664. See O'Callaghan's New Netherland, ii. 236; Colonial History of New York, ii. 440. S. W. P.

De Sille.—[In the account given by Mr. Corwin of the Kip Family in the Corwin Genealogy, p. 49, he states that Henry, eldest son of the first Hendrick Kip, m. Anna de Sille (dau. of Nicasius de Sille and Maria de la Montaigne), Feb. 29, 1660.

Who was the father of this Maria de la Montaigne?

Walburg de Sille, the other dau. of Nicasius de Sille, m. 1st Feb'y 29, 1660, Frans Creiger, and after 1663, m. 2d William Bogardus; no record of this last marriage appears to exist in the Ref. Dutch Church records of New York. Their first child, Cornelia Bogardus, was bap. August 25, 1669.—Eds.]

BEACH.—Whom did Rev. Abraham Beach, D.D., marry? What were the names of his parents? He was a minister of Trinity church from 1784 to 1813. He was an Englishman, and a slight sketch of his life is given in Berrian's History of Trinity Church.

SKIDMORE.—Phœbe, daughter of Samuel Skidmore, married Hendrick Suydam, Aug. 3d, 1770. Wanted the names of Samuel Skidmore's parents, and the maiden name of his wife. The Family were descended probably from Thomas, of Fairfield, Ct., whose son John removed to Jamaica, L. I., dying there in 1690, and leaving sons John and Joseph and daughter Abigail. The Samuel Skidmore who was licensed to marry Abigail Whitehead, 20th Dec., 1764, was, I think, a brother of Phœbe. S. W. P.

GENEALOGICAL NOTES from MS. Journals of ABRAHAM LOTT, once Treasurer of the Province of New York, Attorney for the Heirs of the Estate of ANDIES COEJEMANS, etc.

Johanna Coejemans was baptized in New York, 9th Nov., 1718; Majeke Coejemans, 23d March, 1720; Saml. Sts. Coejemans, 29th January, 1724; Geertyne Coejemans, 11th May, 1726.

In 1783, Mr. Lott, having sold a large tract of the Coejemans Patent in Albany County, to Benjamin Spees and others, went to Albany to complete the bargain with them, and was accompanied by his son-in-law, W. S. Livingston.

On Sunday, July 27, 1783, Mr. Lott met in Albany John De Peyster, Esq., a "relation" of his, aged 90 years; he drank tea at Col. Barrs, who had a daughter baptized by the name (since famous?) of Theodosia Bartow. C. C. D.

CORRECTION.—In the "Emendations to the Bartow Pedigree," ante vol. v., p. 147, it is erroneously stated that John Bartow married Esther Thorn, and that Thomas Bartow was ancestor of the Sargents. Both those brothers died unmarried. E. P. B.

OBITUARIES.

ADRIANCE.—John Adriance died suddenly at his residence in this city on the 3d November last, in the 43d year of his age. He was born on the 6th October, 1832, at McGowan's Pass, the residence of his great grandmother, Margaret (Benson), widow of Andrew McGowan. The house is now standing within the limits of the Central Park, and is the building known as Stetson's Hotel.

He was the only son of the late Isaac Adriance of this city. His grandfather, John Adriance, came from Hopewell, Dutchess County, N. Y., settled at Harlem, N. Y., and married there Mary, daughter of John Sickels.

He was descended on the maternal side from Resolveert Waldron, an Englishman, who had lived at Amsterdam and in the Brazils, and, with his Dutch wife Tameken Nagels, settled at Harlem about 1652. This Waldron was the "Geresolveert" at whose house the Labadist Travellers rested and spent the night in October, 1789, on their trip from New Amsterdam to Kingsbridge, as related in their journal published by the Long Island Historical Society.

Mr. Adriance was a graduate of William's College. He was admitted to the bar in this city on the 16th December, 1856, and soon after formed a business connection with his classmate the late John Vanderpoel. The copartnership was dissolved by the death of Mr. Vanderpoel a few years since.

Mr. Adriance was a member of and a trustee in the Collegiate Reformed Church on Fifth Avenue, a member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and of the St. Nicholas Society, a trustee of the New York Historical Society, and one of the Loan Commissioners of the County of New York.

He married on September 15th, 1858, Lucy W., daughter of Henry L. Sabin, M.D., of Williamstown, Mass., and leaves him surviving his wife and four children—all sons. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery,

CORNELL.—Honorable Ezra Cornell, the founder of Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., died at that place after a long illness, December 9th, 1874. He was the son of Elijah Cornell and Eunice Barnard his wife, and was born at Westchester Landing in Westchester county, January 11th, 1807. His father was a potter at Tarrytown, but in 1819, removed to De Ruyter with his family. There he lived till 1826, when he left his father's house at the age of nineteen to seek employment. This he obtained in Homer, but in 1828 engaged in business as a builder at Ithaca. For fourteen years he continued here, and as a farmer and builder laid the foundation of that splendid fortune which in later years enabled him to be the patron of learning and the mechanic and industrial arts.

In 1843, in connection with the late Prof. Samuel F. B. Morse and Frank O. J. Smith of Portland, Me., Mr. Cornell entered upon an untried project, but out of and by his enterprises and skill he was enabled to reap a fortune. This was the invention of the magnetic telegraph. Congress having made an appropriation of $30,000, the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. J. C. Spencer, appointed Mr. Cornell Assistant Superintendent. Mr. Cornell's friends claim for him the credit of correcting and remedying defects in the Morse instruments.

In 1845, and the two years subsequent, he constructed the telegraph lines from Baltimore to New York and from Troy to Montreal, and invested largely in the stock.

For some years he was President of the American Telegraph Company. In politics he was a whig, till the organization of the Republican party. In 1863 he served as a member of the Legislature, and in 1864 was elected Senator of the Twenty-fourth District, and served two terms.

The crowning glory of his life was the endowment of the University which bears his name, and which he had the satisfaction of seeing take a leading place among our institutions of learning.

He was married to Miss Mary Ann Wood, daughter of Benjamin Wood, of Dryden, in 1831. Their son, Hon. Alonzo B. Cornell, was speaker of the Assembly in 1873. Mr. Cornell was buried at Ithaca. E. S.

HOWLAND.—Benjamin Jenkins Howland died at his residence in this city, on Wednesday, December 9th, 1874, in the 80th year of his age. He was the eldest son of Benjamin and Hepzibah (Hastings) Howland, and was of the sixth generation in descent from John Howland, the "May Flower Pilgrim." He was born at Boston, Mass., September 25, 1795. From the year 1817 to 1846 he was actively engaged in the cotton trade in Charleston, South Carolina. In the year 1821 he married Hannah, daughter of Ballard and Susanna Clark, of Boston, by whom he had ten children, nine of whom survive him. After his removal from Charleston he passed two years in his native city of Boston, and thereafter made New York City his residence; where he continued in active business as a Cotton Merchant until the last three years of his life. Both in Charleston and New York he was prominent in promoting schemes of benevolence and public welfare, and was one of the original founders of the Childrens' Aid Society of this city.

He was an early and honored member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and, when in health, invariably attended its meetings, participating in its discussions, and manifesting great interest in the objects of the Society.

KETCHUM.—Mrs. Elizabeth Ketchum, wife of Edgar Ketchum, died in this city, on the 19th of November last, in the 66th year of her age. She was a daughter of Rev. Alexander Phoenix and Patty (Ingraham), his wife, and was born in New York on 2d of November, 1809. Her grandfather, Daniel Phoenix, was a prominent merchant of New York, and was City Treasurer from 1789 to 1809. Her father was the minister of the Congregational Church at Chicopee, Mass., from 1824 to 1835, and was eminently successful there in building up the church. He died in this city on the 31st of August, 1863. Her mother, who died in the year 1810, was the daughter of Nathaniel Gibbs Ingraham, of New York, and the half-sister of Hon. Daniel Phoenix Ingraham, late a Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Ketchum's "Christian character was marked by intelligence, devotedness, love of prayer and the word of God, and by a conscientious regard for every duty." She was married on the 9th of May, 1838, and leaves her husband and five children, her surviving.

SILL.—Died on Sunday, December 13, 1874, in this city, after a brief illness, Rev. Frederick Sill. He was the fourth son of Thomas and Clarissa (Treadway) Sill, of Middletown, Conn., born June 27, 1813, and a descendant of John and Joanna Sill, who came from England in 1637, and settled in Cambridge, Mass. He married Margaret Cock, was for some years a resident of New Haven, Conn., but about 1857, became Rector of the Episcopal Church at Red Hook, N.Y., from whence he was called to the rectorship of St. Ambrose Church in this city, which position he held for the past sixteen years. He was also "minister in charge" of the Anglo-American Free Church of St. George the Martyr, and Chaplain to the St. George's Society, of New York.

THE NEW YORK
Genealogical and Biographical Record.

VOL. VI. NEW YORK, APRIL, 1875. No. 2.

REV. JOHN JONES, FIRST MINISTER OF FAIRFIELD, CONN., 1644--1664.

BY JOHN J. LATTING, of New York.

THE Rev. John Jones was, as his name implies, of Welsh extraction. The families in Wales bearing his patronymic, however, are so numerous that an attempt to trace his pedigree from any published records would seem to be a task almost impossible. He is stated to have been "Educated and regularly ordained as a preacher of the Gospel in England," where he married and had several children. What is said, in some accounts, of his being identical with the "Johannes Jones" son of William Jones, of Abergavenny in Monmouth, matriculated at Jesus College, Cambridge, April 30th, 1624, at the age of 17, is now admitted to be entirely erroneous.

As appears from the interesting autobiography of Rev. Thomas Shepard, he came a fellow passenger with him in the ship Defence from London, landing at Boston 3d Oct., 1635. Although neither his name nor that of Shepard appears in the Custom House list of passengers of the vessel, yet this list contains the names of Sarah Jones aged 34, Sarah Jones, 15, John 11, Ruth 7, Theophilus 3, Rebecca 2, and Elizabeth 6 months, undoubtedly his wife and children. Not long after this date, he is found to have penetrated through the then wilderness to Musketaquid, afterwards, Concord, and engaged with the Rev. Peter Bulkley in the work of establishing there the "12th Church of Christ." Edward Johnson in his quaint History of New England or "Wonder Working Providence of Zion's Saviour" describes him as a "Valiant Leader of Christ's Souldiers, a holy man of God," and has left us this sonnet to his worth.

"In Desarts depth where Wolves and Beares abide,
  There Jones sits down a wary watch to keepe
O'er Christ's deare flock, who now are wandered wide;
  But not from him, whose eyes ne're close in sleepe.
Surely it sutes thy melancholly minde
  Thus solitary for to spend thy dayes,
Much more thy soule in Christ Content doth finde,
  To work for Him, who thee to joy will raise.
Leading thy son to Land, yet more remote,
  To feed his flock upon this Western waist:
Exhort him then Christ's kingdome to promote;
  That he with thee of lasting joyes may tast."

To the early settlers Concord proved a barren and unprofitable place. They were evidently restricted in their "land grants" by the narrow-mindedness or selfishness of the Government of the "Bay." The people, dissatisfied, began to leave for more desirable localities, and carried with them and disseminated the ill reputation of the town. Some years afterwards (in 1658) Richard Crabb and his wife, of Stamford, were brought to trial at New Haven before the Court of Magistrates, for the offence of resisting the officers sent to arrest Thomas Marshall, the Quaker, whom he harbored at his house, and for "uttering clamorous and reproachful speeches against the Ministry, Government and Officers." Governor Newman, who presided on this trial, took occasion to cast in the culprit's teeth the report of a discourse he is said to have held with "two men y^t. came fro y^e. Bay." First he asked them, whence they came? They said, from Concord; to which friend Crabb was so unwise as to reply, "y^t. was a beggarly place." They said, it was a good place. He rejoined, "y^t. y^e priest and y^e people y^t. came thence were almost starved." The men replied, they had no priest. To which Crabb, having now, by this admission, the advantage in the argument, remarked "I see you are in darkness, as all the country is."[1]

The priest here referred to was, of course, none other than Pastor Jones, who, with his family and little flock of Christ, in the month of September, 1644, reached Fairfield on the pleasant shores of Long Island Sound. Here he labored with assiduity and success for twenty years, organizing and founding the First Congregational Church of that town.

The early records of this church, as well as those of the town having been burnt, or carried off, at the time of the destruction of the Village of Fairfield by Governor Tryon in 1779, we are left without any authentic aids to illustrate the period of his pastorate.

One letter only of Mr. Jones, written by him to Governor John Winthrop, Jr., in the early part of the second year after his arrival at Fairfield, has been preserved,[2] which would seem to indicate that, at that time, he had not yet fully decided to continue his residence there. This letter is as follows:

To the Wor^full Mr. John Winthrope at Pequot these present. Leave this letter w^th Mr. Hopkins at Hartford to be sent.

Fairfield Mar. 5–46 [-7].

S^r. Yo^rs of Feb. 22 I received, being very sorrye y^t my absence from home at y^e time when y^or messenger came hither, hath deprived of soe fit an oppertunity of returning an answeare. I perceue by y^or letter y^t Adam y^e Indian hath informed yow how y^e case stands w^th me. And indeed I, despaireing of a convenient passage vnto yow before y^e Spring, did engage myselfe to keepe a lecture here vntill y^e season of y^e yeare would permitt me to remoue, soe that my engagements here being ended w^th the winter, it is my desire, & full resolution (if God permitt) to take y^e first opportunity of coming to yow either by land or water. For other passages in y^or letter I hope to answeare them by word of mouth shortly. In y^e meantime, I desire y^or praires for y^e guidance of heawen and w^th my seruice and respects being duly rendered to y^or selfe and Mrs. Winthrope w^th love to all y^or little ones and little Margaret, I remaine

Yo^rs in all observance
John Jones.

[1] To the comprehension of the Puritan Concord men "Priest" signified Papal rule, while to Richard Crabb, the Quaker, who claimed to have the true "Light of the spirit," priest, pastor, minister, were one and the same.

[2] Mass. His. Soc. Collections, Vol. 1, 5th series, p. 339.

In the year 1653, during his ministry, occurred in Fairfield that disgraceful and shameful proceeding—the trial, condemnation, and execution of Goodwife Knapp, for witchcraft, one of the first instances in New England of the tragic results of that superstitious delusion. That both the Pastor and his wife were active participants in this affair, is apparent from the evidence given on the trial of the suit of Thomas Staples against Roger Ludlow, in the following year. Ludlow had reported among other things that Mrs. Knapp, both before and after her condemnation, had charged Goodwife Staples with being a witch, and he, Ludlow, had also further defamed her by charging her with "making a trade of lying." Hence, the husband, in this suit, sought vindication of his wife's honor, and pecuniary compensation for his own and her mental sufferings. The proofs produced on this trial, are the only known record of the proceedings in the witchcraft trial.

Mrs. Lucy Pell, wife of Thomas Pell, testified that at Goodwife Knapp's trial, she was one of the women appointed by the Court to search the victim's body for witchmarks, and Mistress Jones, the Pastor's wife, was present, and pressed her to confess whether there were any other witches in Fairfield. On the day succeeding her condemnation, and while she lay in prison, both the Pastor and his wife are found visiting her; it may be, only for her spiritual comfort, but the witnesses say they were continually urging her to confess she was a witch, and thus "make way for the minister to do her good." Rebecca Hull, the Pastor's own daughter, in her testimony, gives us a picture of the mournful procession to the place of execution, where Mr. Ludlow and her father are seen walking together by her side, still pressing her to confess she was a witch. To the credit and courage of the poor woman, be it added, she belied not her dignity of womanhood by making any such absurd admission. [1]

It is presumed this Mistress Jones was his second wife, Susanna, mentioned in his will, and who survived him. His first wife, Sarah, as well as his son, Theophilus, probably died in Concord. He himself, in 1658, had already attained to such an age as to require an assistant in his pastorate, which the church readily provided. The respect in which he was at this time held by his townsmen and the General Court, may be inferred from the following entry which the court saw fit to make at their session at Hartford, on the 20th of May, of this year: "This Court approving the pious care of the Towne of Fairfield in procuring help for Mr. Joanes by his own consent thereunto, as far as appears by a papr prsented by their Deputies to ye Court, doe order that according to their desires, the aforesaid paper be kept amongst the Court papers & desire the Towne not any way thereupon to deprive yeir Revrnd ancient Pastor Mr. Joanes in sickness or health of his comfortable maintenance."

He died at Fairfield, in the month of January, 1664, and left the following will:

January 17, 1664.

I, John Jones, Pastor of the Church at Fairfield in New England, being weak in body, but of perfect memory, do make and ordain this my last will and testament.—imprimis, I commit my soul into the hands of God, and my body to be buried; and as concerning my worldly goods, I dis-

[1] It may not be out of place to add that the Court held "that there was no proof that good wife Staples was a witch," and Ludlow, the defendant, was ordered to "pay £10 to the husband for his wife's name, and £5 for his trouble and costs."

pose of them as follows;—First, my will is that seven pounds be taken out of my estate which I shall leave behind me, to be delivered to the heirs or executors of Capt. Cullick, sometime one of the magistrates in Connecticut Jurisdiction, being due to him.

Item, whereas I promised to my dear wife, Susanna Jones, fifty pounds, in case I died before her, and beside gave her a silver bowl within a little while after that I was married unto her, this I do confirm by my last will that they are due unto her:—moreover, my will is that the said Susanna my wife, shall have the use and benefit of my twelve acres of land in the great meadow, and of my orchard in Fairfield, during her life; and after her death that it be divided equally to or amongst my six children, John. Eliphalet, and my four daughters, Sarah Wilson, Widow Ruth James, Rebecca Hull, and Elizabeth Hill.

Item.—I give to my eldest son John, part of my library, to wit, the works of Augustine, Chrisostom, and of other authors (usually called "the Fathers.")

Item.—I give the rest of my goods undisposed (my debts being paid and funeral discharged) to be equally divided amongst my aforesaid children, John, Eliphalet, Sarah, Ruth, Rebecca and Elizabeth.

In witness whereof, I set my hand and seal the day and year aforesaid.

JOHN JONES. : Seal. :

Postscript.—I make and ordain my wife Susanna Jones, sole executrix of this my Will and Testament, and Mr. Gold and Mr. Pell, both of Fairfield, overseers thereof.

The widow doth accept of the place of an Executrix.

The widow makes oath that this is the last Will of Mr. J. Jones to the best of her knowledge—this 30th June, 1665.

NATHAN GOLD.

Of the children, Sarah married Thomas Bulkley, son of the Revd. Peter Bulkley of Concord. They came with her father to Fairfield, where he died about 1658. By him she had a daughter, Sarah, born at Concord, Aug. 12, 1640. After her first husband's death, she married Anthony Wilson, of Fairfield. He died early in 1662. She subsequently made a will, April 26, 1667, giving lands to her two sons, John and Joseph, besides books and other property; and to her daughters, Sarah, wife of Eleazer Brown, Rebecca, wife of Joseph Whelpley, and Hannah, books and other property.

JOHN JONES, son of the Rev. John Jones, graduated at Harvard College in 1643, in his 19th year. Was admitted freeman at Concord in 1645. He is supposed to be the "son" referred to by Johnson in the verses on his father above quoted, and is believed to have subsequently removed to, and settled in the Island of Nevis, in the West Indies, where he married and died prior to 1673, leaving a son, John, who with his mother, the widow, subsequently returned to New Haven.[1]

[1] Savage Gen. Dic., Vol. II., p. 563. Colonial Rec. of Conn., II., p. 324.

Rebecca, one of the daughters, married Cornelius Hull, of Fairfield, by whom she had Samuel, Cornelius, and Theophilus, and daughters Rebecca, Sarah, who married Robert Silliman, and Martha, who married Cornelius Liston.

Elizabeth, another daughter, married William Hill, of Fairfield, and survived her husband, who died in 1684. She had five children, William, Eliphalet, Joseph, John, and Sarah.

Ruth, the other daughter, married —— James, but of her or her descendants nothing now is known.

Eliphalet Jones, youngest son of the Rev. John Jones, was born at Concord, January 11, 1641. Entered Harvard College in 1662, but did not graduate, probably by reason of his father's death in the second year of his course, and of his limited means. In 1669 he is found stationed at Greenwich, in Connecticut, in which year he is admitted to the privileges of a freeman.[1] Whether he was here at this time as a settled minister or not does not clearly appear. In 1672 he was called to Stamford, as colleague or assistant to the Rev. John Bishop of that place. On the 3d of May of that year, the town voted "to give Mr. Jones an invitation to be a minister of the Gospel in this place if he remove from Greenwich." In November of the same year he is "accommodated with a piece of land in his own right, provided he settle here in the work of the ministry," and Mr. Law, Mr. Holly, and Jonathan Sellick are chosen to treat with the Greenwich men "about their compliance with Stamford, for the upholding of the ministry in this place." The town subsequently exchanged the above "piece of land," which was "on the west side of the Southfield," for the more eligible tract on the beautiful headland fronting and overlooking Long Island Sound, now owned and occupied by Capt. B. L. Waite, and the Brothers Alfred and Benjamin Scofield. This was the same field which the Sagamores reserved for their planting ground when making the original grant for the town in 1640, but which also was subsequently surrendered by them to the town. It was now (1672) voted that "Mr. Jones shall have that piece of land at Wescus which was improved by the Engins in case it be cleared from all English and Engins and this land to be Mr. Jones' proper right in lue of that piece of land granted to him on the west side of the southfield." While residing here he also preached at Rye from time to time. The General Court of Connecticut sitting at Hartford, May 14, 1674, made the following order: "This Court desires Mr. Eliphalet Joanes to take the paynes to despence the word of God to the people of Rye once a fortnight on the Lord's Day till the Court, October next and then this Court will take further order concerning them and for Mr. Jones's satisfaction."[2] He must have been popular as a minister at this period. As early as 1669, the year of his commencement in the ministry at Greenwich, the people of Jamaica, L. I., voted to send a messenger to invite him to visit them with a view to a settlement, but it appears he declined going. In 1675, on an invitation from the people of Huntington, L. I., he visited them, and in January following he was desired to "Continue among them as their minister, and they voted to give him twenty acres of land where he chose to select it. He appears not to have permanently settled there however, until 1677, when he was formally ordained as the successor of the Rev. William Leverich, over the First Presbyterian Church at that place. Here he continued for over half a century. He is described as "a man of great purity and simplicity of manners, and a faithful and successful preacher."

Not until he had attained his 78th year, did he have the aid of an assistant. At that time Mr. Ebenezer Prime, then a young man, ancestor of our well-known and very worthy fellow-citizens, the Revs. Samuel I. and Edward D. G. Prime, and of Wm. C. Prime, Esq., was engaged in that capacity, and four years afterwards, in 1723, was ordained as colleague; on which occasion Mr. Jones, then in his 82d year, presided at the ordaining council, and delivered the pastoral charge. He lived to the age of 91 years and died in Huntington, June 5, 1731. He never married, and what estate he had he bequeathed to his sister's son, Eliphalet Hill, his namesake, who, in his declining years, took care of him and managed his affairs.

At the easterly end of the main street in the now peaceful village of Huntington, rises an eminence which overlooks the town and the beautiful harbor and the country for miles around. This the early settlers had set apart and consecrated for the sepulchres of their dead; and here they buried their Pastor. But here, fifty years afterwards, came Col. Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford, with his vandal troops, and demolished the church, and with its timbers erected block houses and barracks over the graves which he levelled for the purpose, using the tombstones for building their fire-places and ovens. One veritable chronicler tells us how he had heard from the lips of living witnesses that they had seen these soldiers draw their loaves of bread from these ovens, having the reversed inscriptions of the tombstones of their friends on the lower crust! But "the whirligig of Time brought about its revenges:" the Briton with his minions of outrage passed away, and the Peace of Desolation settled over the sacred enclosure.

When a full century had elapsed, and the ashes of the aged minister had reposed so long beneath the sod, that the place of their interment had been utterly forgotten, or all mementos of it entirely obliterated by these ravages of war, the people of another generation—the descendants of the sires to whom he had so long and faithfully dispensed the Word of God—still cherishing and reviving the memory and tradition of his virtues, erected a plain but decent cenotaph in remembrance of him, in this their public burial ground. The stone bears the following inscription: "In Memory of Rev. Eliphalet Jones who was the only settled Minister in Huntington, from 1676 to 1723. He was born in Concord, Massachusetts, and died between 1730 and 1740, near 100 years old."

He deserved a better monument, and one with a more fitting and correct inscription.

BRIEF NOTES OF THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE DEWEY FAMILY IN AMERICA.

By Benjamin W. Dwight, of Clinton, N. Y.

The facts here detailed were gathered, many of them, by the writer, when engaged in investigating the history of The Strong Family, at various points in New England, and especially at Northampton and Westfield, Mass., as well as at Lebanon, Ct. Other associated items have been accumulated at different times through several years past from a variety of sources.

THOMAS DEWEY, the Settler (spelled also in the Dorchester records. Duee), came to Dorchester, Mass., in 1633, from Sandwich, Kent, England, near the ancient town of Dover, and was enrolled as a freeman there. May 14, 1634. He removed about 1638 to Windsor, Ct., and m. there, March 22, 1638–9, widow Frances Clarke, by whom he had 5 children. He was cornet of the town troop of soldiers. He d. at Windsor, April 27, 1648. He was frequently juror and deputy to the General Court. His widow m. for a 3d husband. Nov. 30, 1648, George Phelps, and soon afterwards removed to Westfield, Mass., with all the Dewey children except Israel, who remained in Windsor and d. there at an advanced age, leaving no issue. Thomas Dewey and all his descendants for several generations are believed to have been farmers. [The first husband of Mrs. Frances Dewey was Joseph Clarke. Their daughter, Mary Clarke, was the first wife of John Strong, Jr., of Windsor, son of Elder John Strong of Northampton. See Hist. Strong Family by the writer, p. 20. Mrs. Frances (Dewey) Phelps had a son, Jacob Phelps. b. about 1650, who m. May 2, 1672, Dorothy Ingersoll, b. in 1654, dau. of John Ingersoll, of Hartford, Ct., and afterwards of Northampton, Mass., and Dorothy Lord, dau. of Thomas Lord of Hartford. They had 6 children. 1. Dorothy Phelps, b. May 10. 1675, who m. Nov. 30, 1693, Edward Kibbe, of Enfield, Ct. 2. Hannah Phelps. b. Nov. 26, 1677, who m. John Kibbe. 3. Israel Phelps, b. April 3, 1681. 4. Benjamin Phelps, b. Jan. 8, 1683. 5. Joseph Phelps, b. Aug. 5, 1686. 6. Jedediah Phelps, b. Dec. 7, 1688].

In the library of Mr. John C. Cruger, of Cruger's Island, Dutchess County, New York, is the ancient Dutch family Bible of John Cruger, the first of the name in New York. It was printed in Dordrecht (or Dort) in 1688. The record is in Dutch down to the year 1728, and after that in English. The following translation of the Dutch portion is accurate, and the whole has been carefully copied. The arms are from an ancient iron seal, now in the possession of Mr. John C. Cruger, which belonged to John Cruger, and has always been kept with the Bible from which the record is taken.

JOHN CRUGER.

JOHN CRUGER came from Germany to America previous to the year 1700, and resided in the City of New York. An old record in the possession of Mr. John C. Cruger, of Cruger's Island, says: "From the traditionary account in the family and from the coat of arms which he brought with him it is supposed he was descended from the family of Baron von Cruger. The name of that family was always spelt with a C, whilst that of the commonalty in Germany is spelt with a K." The name itself in its origin is a corruption, undoubtedly, of the Latin Cruciger, or cross-bearer.

He was a merchant, a high-toned gentleman, and a prominent citizen of New York during the first half of the eighteenth century. He was elected Alderman of the Dock Ward in 1712, and held the office till 1733 inclusive, the long period of twenty-two years. In 1739 he became Mayor of the City, and remained in office till his death on 13th August, 1744.

He married in 1702 Maria Cuyler, eldest daughther of Hendrick Cuyler of Albany, the first of that name in America, and Anna his wife, and had three sons, Henry, and John and Tileman. TILEMAN died a young man, and unmarried.

JOHN, the youngest son, who never married, was, like his father, eminent as a merchant, and in political life. He was elected Alderman in 1754 and 1755. The next year ,1756, he was elected Mayor of New York, and held the office for ten years till 1766. In 1759 he was elected a representative in the Assembly, and remained a member till the termination of the English rule in 1775, the long period of seventeen years. In 1769, in a closely contested election, he was chosen Speaker over William Livingston, the candidate of the Presbyterian party, afterwards Governor of New Jersey, and filled the same office in all succeeding Assemblies to the Revolution. From this fact he was always known in New York until his death, which took place at Kinderhook in 1792, as "The Old Speaker." When the stamp act troubles occurred, John Cruger was chosen a delegate to the famous Congress of 1765, with Messrs. Bayard and Lispenard. He took a prominent part in the proceedings, and wrote the "Declaration of Rights and Grievances," issued by that body. He was likewise the first President of the Chamber of Commerce of New York; and is the signer of the above record.

HENRY CRUGER, the eldest of the two surviving sons of John Cruger the first, who was born 25th November, 1707, in New York, resided for many years in that city, and was also in political life. He was a member of the Assembly from 1745 to 1759, fourteen years, and subsequently was appointed to the Council of the Province, and served till 1773 when he resigned, and was succeeded by his eldest son, John Harris Cruger. In May, 1775, his health being impaired, he went to England and resided at Bristol with his second son, Henry, then Member of Parliament for that City. He died there in 1778, and lies buried in the centre aisle of Bristol Cathedral. He married for his first wife on 28th September, 1734, a lady of Jamaica, the widow of Patrick Montgomery of that Island, whose maiden name was Sloughter or Slanghter, but she died without children. His second wife was a Miss Harris of the same Island, by whom he had four sons and two daughters.

1. John Harris Cruger, m. 25 Nov., 1762, Anne de Lancey, eldest dau. of Brig.-Gen. Oliver de Lancey, of New York.
2. Henry Cruger, m. Miss Peach, daughter of Samuel Peach the great Banker of Bristol, England. 2. Caroline Elizabeth Blair of England.
3. Tileman, m. —— of Curacoa.
4. Nicholas, m. 1. Anne de Nully, dau. of Auguste, Compte de Nully, of Santa Cruz. 2. Anne Markoe, dau. Isaac Markoe of Santa Cruz.
5. Mary, m. Jacob Walton, of New York.
6. Elizabeth, m. Peter van Schaack, of Kinderhook.

John Harris Cruger, the eldest son, succeeded his father in 1773 as one of the Governor's Council, and was also Chamberlain of the City of New York, and in office at the breaking out of hostilities three years later. When the Provincial Brigade "De Lancey's Battalions" was raised in 1776, under Oliver de Lancey as Brigadier General, "for the defence of Long Island, and other exigencies," he was commissioned Lieut.-Colonel of the 1st battalion or regiment, General de Lancey himself being the Colonel. He was very distinguished as an officer, on Long Island, at Savannah, Charleston, and Camden, brilliantly and successfully defended Fort Ninety-six in South Carolina, against Gen. Nathaniel Greene, who was compelled to raise the siege, and by his coolness and steadiness turned the fortunes of the day in favor of the British at Eutaw Springs.

After the war he went to England, and resided at Beverley, in Yorkshire, where he died. He had no issue.

Henry Cruger, the second son, educated at King's College, N. Y., was in 1757 sent by his father to Bristol, Eng'and, to enter a counting-house. He became a successful and popular merchant of that city, which he made his home. In 1774 he and Edmund Burke were nominated for Members of Parliament for Bristol, and after a sharp contest elected. He was also once Sheriff of Bristol, and in 1781 was elected its Mayor. In 1784 he was again elected to Parliament. In 1790 he declined a re-election, having determined to return to America and reside there for the rest of his life, and in the same year came back with his family to his native city. Here he soon became engaged in politics, and notwithstanding his service in Parliament, and especially his re-election in 1784, after the peace of 1783, and subsequent service of about six years, he was, in 1792, elected a Senator of the State of New York, and served as such. His residence during the latter part of his life was at 382 Greenwich St., New York, where he died the 24th of April, 1827, aged 88 years.

His first wife was Miss Peach, daughter of Samuel Peach the great Banker of Bristol, by whom he had one child, Samuel Peach Cruger, who subsequently took the surname of Peach, and was the late Samuel Peach Peach of Tockington House, Gloucester, in England, who married a daughter of William Miles, of Leigh Court, near Bristol. They had one child, Emma

Sarah, who married in 1820 Lord John Murray-Aynsley, a grandson of John Murray, third Duke of Athol, and their issue were:

1. Charles Murray, b. 1821.
2. James Murray, b. 1823.
3. John Cruger Murray, b. 1825.
4. George Herbert Murray, b. 1826.
5. Hugh Percy Murray, b. 1828.
6. Emma Athol Murray, b. 1843.

The second wife of Henry Cruger was Miss Caroline Elizabeth Blair, and their issue were,

1. Henry H. Cruger, m. Mary, dau. of Nicholas Cruger, his first cousin.
2. Cordelia, m. John H. Bailey, of N. Y.
3. Louisa, d. unm. in 1853.
4. Matilda, m. Thomas J. Oakley, late Judge of the Superior Court of New York.
5. William Cruger.
6. John, who was the father of John Peach Cruger, of Crugers, Westchester County, N. Y.

Tileman Cruger, the third son, was a West India merchant, married a lady of the Island of Curacoa and resided there. He had a son, Henry, and other children.

Nicholas Cruger, the fourth and youngest son, was also a West India merchant in extensive business at Santa Cruz, and it was in his counting-house there, that the relatives of the mother of Alexander Hamilton, the daughter of a French physician of the Island of Nevis, named Faucette, who were residents of Santa Cruz, placed her son as a clerk. Cruger liked the youth, and chiefly through his influence and advice, he was subsequently sent to New York, and thus enabled to enter upon the great career which he afterwards ran. Nicholas Cruger, unlike his brother, leaned to the American side at the time of the Revolution, and became a great friend and admirer of Washington, whom he accompanied in his final triumphant entry into New York on Nov. 25th, 1783. On one of his voyages to Santa Cruz the vessel was captured by a British man-of-war. The captain asked him his name; on hearing it, he at once enquired if he was any relation to Col. Cruger of the British army at the South. "He is my brother," said Cruger. "Why," exclaimed the captain, "I am carrying to Halifax the despatches to Government with the account of his great success in Carolina," and then told him of the Colonel's brave and successful defence of Fort Ninety-six.

Taken again on another voyage to Santa Cruz, the captors found among his effects a portrait of Washington. On opening the box, the officer exclaimed, "Who have we here?" And instantly recognizing the portrait, continued, "Oh, its the Pretender, I perceive." The vessel was sent into New York, condemned, and Cruger kept a prisoner on parole. His captivity was not very severe, as he was permitted to reside with the relatives of his brother-in-law, Walton, at the Walton House.

Nicholas Cruger married first, Ann, daughter of Compte de Nully, of Santa Cruz, whose mother, a lady of Dutch extraction, was named Heyliger. By her (who died at Santa Cruz in 1784) he had issue:

1. Bertram Peter, m. first, Catharine, dau. of John B. Church and Angelica Schuyler, his wife.—Issue:

1. EUGENE, d. unmarried.
2. ANGELICA, m. Auguste Count de Bastard, of France.
3. JOHN CHURCH, m. 1. Miss Jones, who died without issue. 2. Euphemia van Rensselaer, third daughter of the old Patroon.

2. Henry, b. 1769, d. 1797.
3. Elizabeth.
4. Cornelius, 2d.

Mrs. Van Schaak, d. at Kinderhook, 18th April, 1778.

Mr. Van Schaak, married secondly, in April, 1789, Elizabeth van Alen, of Kinderhook, who died in 1813. By her he had John, David, Henry Cruger (now of Manlius), and several other children.

Two old manuscripts, one in the possession of Mr. John C. Cruger, and one relating to Col. John Harris Cruger in my own, Valentine's Manual, the Journals of the Assembly, and Council, of the Province of New York, the Life of Peter van Schaak, Henry C. van Schaak's address before the N. Y. Hist. Soc. on Henry Cruger of Bristol, Burke's Peerage, Burke's Landed Gentry, and some verbal communications from Mr. John C. Cruger and Mr. William Betts, are the authorities consulted in preparing the biographical portions of the above record.

The accompanying portrait of John Cruger is from an original miniature, in the possession of Miss Anna Carolina Cruger, of New York, enlarged by Thomas Hicks, the artist, for the very valuable work of Mr. John Austin Stevens on the Chamber of Commerce of New York, to whose personal kindness, and the courtesy of the N. Y. Historical Society, to which he has presented the plate, I am indebted for its use.

RECORDS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK AND VICINITY.

Communicated by ABRAHAM S. UNDERHILL, of New York.

MARRIAGES

[The original records of all these marriages are copies of the marriage certificates, and to each certificate are appended the names of the witnesses present at the ceremony. As these names are, in most instances, very numerous, generally comprising all members of the Society present at the meeting, and are thus necessarily merely repetitions of the names of the same persons, the Publication Committee have concluded to omit them. The full transcript is in the hands of the Committee, and open to the inspection of any one desiring to examine or copy the names.]

NOTES AND QUERIES.

CRABB, RICHARD—Was of Stamford, Conn., 1641–1658. Who was his wife? On his trial before the Court of Magistrates, at New Haven, May 28th, 1658, he testified that "she was a well-bred woman in England, a zealous professor from her childhood, almost beyond example." (New Haven Col. Records, vol. ii., p. 246). In a petition of Robert Coe, of Jamaica, dated May 9, 1661, preserved among the Dutch MSS. in the Secretary of State's Office at Albany, vol. ix., p. 600, he refers to Richard Crabbe as his "brother-in-law." Crabb was presumably at this date a resident of Oyster Bay, L. I., where he married for his second wife, Alice the widow of Peter Wright. He died there on the 6th of April, 1680. J. J. L.

DE SILLE.—Vol. vi., p. 54.—In reply to enquiries about Nicasius de Sille, I would state that de Sille had children, Laürence, born in Holland, and married a daughter of Capt. Martin Cregier; Gerdientje, who married Jan Gerritse Van Coŭwenhoven, the ancestor of the Brooklyn and New Utrecht branches of the Coŭwenhoven family, among whom the name of Nicholas abounds to this day; and Anna, who married, Feb. 29, 1660 (see N. Y. Dutch ch. rec.), Hendrick Kip.

The Walbrûg de Sille who married Frans Cregier was probably a relative of NICASIŬS, but I have seen no evidence of her being his daughter. On the marriage record she is entered as from Mestricht, while Anna, who was married the same day, is entered from Van Wyck.

The Coŭwenhovens of New Utrecht had some years ago a portrait of de Sille, which unfortunately through carelessness was destroyed by the children of the family. T. G. B.

GRIMALDI.—The slightest information of a family bearing this name, who went from Genoa before the Revolution to Savannah, Georgia, will be very thankfully received by the undersigned. This family were at one time Dukes of Genoa and Counts of Beaufort.

WILLIAM JOHN POTTS, Camden, New Jersey.

HALLETT, LYDIA.—What was the maiden name of the wife of Joseph Hallett, and who were her parents? Her husband was born at Hallett's Point, August 14, 1714, and died at same place December 14, 1731, aged 27; having issue by his wife Lydia, one son and one daughter.

1st. Joseph (merchant, a prominent member of the N. Y. Committees of Safety, of the first State Congresses, active in procuring arms and ammunition for the army at the opening of the Revolution, of large wealth), born Jan. 26, 1731, died August 9, 1799.

2d. Lydia, born 1732, soon after her father's death; died 26th Feb., 1812 (buried at Sunswick, Newtown, Blackwell reserved burial ground). She married, Feb. 19, 1755, her cousin Colonel Jacob Blackwell, by whom she left issue.

Letters of administration were granted on the estate of the above Joseph (who died 1731), Vol. 11 of wills, p. 205, to Richard Alsop of Newtown, and therein the widow Lydia is frequently named. The inventory is made by Jacob Blackwell and Thomas Alsop. M. L. D.

HAZARD.—Mrs. Nathaniel Hazard, born Elizabeth Drummond. Who were the parents of Mrs. Elizabeth Hazard? Her husband Nathaniel Hazard died at his house in Hanover Square, N. Y. City, January, 1765, and left a numerous progeny. Her maiden name was Elizabeth Drummond; she died at the house of her daughter Mrs. Joseph Hallett, 229 Duane St., N. Y. City, May 27, 1811, aged 98. Tradition says that she was born in Scotland and passed most of her youth in France. Only by a long residence in France could she have acquired the thorough knowledge of French which she posessed, and correct pronunciation as rare then as now with the English speaking races. Dutch and English were equally familiar, whether she understood Scotch, the writer has not learned. Her knowledge of the Bible and Biblical History were very remarkable, in argument she was wont to illustrate such subjects with quotations and references, references often drawn from works not easily attainable in this country. For this knowledge, for the information she could impart and for her piety, her society was sought by the clergy of this and neighboring cities, including members of other besides her own (Presbyterian) denomination.

Tradition names Scotland as her birth-place, and the date is fixed, by the record of her death, at 1713. On the other hand it is found that Ann, wife of Robert Drummond (a vintner) was confined in 1713 in New York City.

May 30, 1716, Robert and Ann Drummond (he a vintner), residing in Elizabethtown, N. J., applied in this city for letters of administration on the estate of Monteth Noell, said Ann Drummond having formerly been the wife of Richard Hall, who in his lifetime was brother to Monteth Noell by the mother's side. It further appears that by her former husband the said Ann had two children, Elizabeth and Ann.

It is now claimed notwithstanding the assertion of those now living who know Mrs. Nathaniel Hazard, that she was the daughter of Robert and Ann Drummond; but is it likely that having one daughter living (by her first husband Hall) named Elizabeth, a daughter by Mrs. Drummond's second husband would also be called Elizabeth. Mrs. Hazard's descendants are so numerous that we may hope extended inquiry will clear up the disputed question of her birth, the true facts must be known by some of them.

ODELL.—William Odell, supposed to be a descendant of the English family of Odell mentioned in Burke's "Landed Gentry," in 1639, came from England to Concord, Mass., where he was probably a member of the congregation of the Rev. Peter Bulkley, who was born in the parish of Odell, Bedford Co., England. In 1644, Mr. Odell removed to Fairfield, Conn., and his son William became one of the principal proprietors of Rye, New York.

The undersigned will be happy to correspond with those interested, with a view to confirming the probable relationship between the English and American families; and also with reference to the preparation of a genealogy of the family.

EUGENE ODELL,
Westchester Co., New York.

SCULL.—John Scull, Long Island, 1695. Information is desired of John Scull, who, with Jonas Valentine, John Somers, Jonathan Adams and Peter Covenhoven, all described as whalemen from Long Island, bought land of Thomas Budd on Great Egg Harbor, New Jersey, in 1695. WILLIAM JOHN POTTS, Camden, New Jersey.

WESSELLS.—Were Evert Wessells, cooper, will proved 1694, Laurens Wessells, will proved 1724, and Frans Wessells, will proved 1734, the children of Wessel Evertsen, who had children Evert, Laurens, Frans, etc.?

What was the date of birth or baptism of Johannes, one of the sons of Laurens? Did Jan or John Wessells, supposed to be a brother of the above, marry, and whom? Did he have any children, and what were their names and dates of birth? T. M. P.

WILLETT.—Do New York records show any family connection between the Thomas Willett from Bristol, England, m. in the Dutch Church, Sept. 1, 1643, to Sarah Cornell, of Essex, England (see RECORD for January, 1875, p. 35), and Thomas Willett, first Mayor of New York under the English? If so, the combined facts may help to find the English pedigree. J. W. T., 40 Water St., Boston.

OBITUARY.

ASPINWALL.—William H. Aspinwall died at his house, No. 33 University Place, New York, on Tuesday, January 19, 1875, in the 67th year of his age. He was the son of the late John Aspinwall, a well-known merchant of New York. His family, however, is a New England one. He was for many years a partner with William E. Howland in the house of Howland and Aspinwall, which succeeded that of the elder Howlands. He took much interest in the establishment of steam communication with San Francisco, and the success of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. and of the Panama Railroad is largely due to his exertions. The eastern terminus of the road was named after him in acknowledgment of the zeal and ability which he displayed. He leaves two sons, Lloyd Aspinwall, who succeeded him in the firm, and the Rev. John A. Aspinwall, Rector of Christ Church, Bay Ridge, Long Island. His three daughters married James Renwick, John W. Minturn and Ambrose C. Kingsland, Jr.

DELAFIELD.—Joseph, Henry and Edward Delafield were the three surviving children of John Delafield, the head of an ancient English family, who settled in New York towards the end of the last century. By his intermarriage with Ann, daughter of Joseph Hallett, of Hallett's Cove, now Astoria, Queens Co., N. Y., Mr. Delafield was the father of a numerous family, of whom seven sons and three daughters grew up. The eldest son John married in England Mary, daughter and heiress of John Roberts of Whitchurch, Co. Bucks. The only issue of this marriage, according to Burke, was a daughter, Mary Ann. He married secondly, in New York, Elizabeth Tallmadge, and had issue, John, who settled in Geneva, New York, and Mary, married to Bishop Neely of Maine. The second son Joseph married Julia, daughter of Maturin Livingston and granddaughter of the late Governor Morgan Lewis. His children were Maturin and Lewis, the latter of whom married a daughter of the late Francis R. Tillou. The third and fourth sons, William and Henry, were twins. William was not married. Henry married, late in life, Mary, daughter of Judge Munson. She died before him, leaving two daughters. Edward married 1st, October 12, 1821, Miss Elinor E. Langdon Elwyn, dau. of Thomas Langdon Elwyn, Esq., of Portsmouth, N. H., and 2d, January 31, 1839, Julia Floyd, dau. of Col. Nicoll Floyd, of Mastic, L. I., by whom he had issue, with others, Francis, who married Katharine, daughter of the late Henry Van Rensselaer, by his intermarriage with Mary, daughter of the Hon. John A. King, Governor of New York from 1856 to 1858. Richard, the sixth son, married a lady from Old Point Comfort, Virginia. Rufus King, the youngest son, married Eliza, daughter of William Bard, formerly of Hyde Park, New York, by his intermarriage with Katharine, daughter, of Nicholas Cruger of St. Croix, W. I., the owner of Rose Hill, New York. He had issue, with others, Edward, who married a daughter of Frederic Schuchardt. The daughters of John Delafield, Ann and Emma, died unmarried. Susan married the late Henry Parish, of New York.

JOSEPH DELAFIEED graduated at Yale College in 1808, and studied law in the office of Josiah Ogden Hoffman, whose partner he afterwards became. At the beginning of the war of 1812, he raised a regiment, the 46th, in which he held a major's commission. His regiment was stationed during the war at Governor's Island, in the harbor of New York. He was afterwards appointed commissioner on the part of the United States to settle the northern boundary. He occupied himself chiefly in literary and scientific pursuits; and, after a long and useful life, he died on Friday, February 12, 1875, at the great age of eighty-four.

HENRY DELAFIELD and his twin brother William were born at their father's country seat, a large and elegant house still standing at Hallett's Cove, now called Astoria, Long Island, on the 19th of July, 1792. They became merchants in New York, and were successful in their business. William died in 1853, and Henry on the 14th of February, 1875, in the 83d year of his age.

EDWARD DELAFIELD and his brother Richard received their early training at Union Hall Academy, Jamaica, Long Island, then and long afterwards a celebrated seat of learning. The former graduated at Yale College in 1812, and took his degree of M. D. in New York in 1815. He became a well known and successful practising physician, and after holding several conspicuous positions in his profession, he became in 1854 President of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, an office which he retained until his death. He died on Saturday, February 13th, 1875, in his eighty first year.

The three brothers were buried in Greenwood on Tuesday, February 16th, after a solemn and impressive service in Trinity Church, New York.

FIELD.—Maunsel B. Field died in New York on the 24th day of January, 1875, at the age of 54. He was Secretary of Legation when John T. Mason was Minister at Paris, and was afterwards Assistant-Secretary of the Treasury at Washington, under Chase, Fessenden and McCulloch. In the latter years of his life he practised at the bar, and in December, 1873, was appointed by Governor Dix Judge of the Second District Court.

KNAPP.—Shepherd Knapp, late President of the Mechanic's Bank in New York, died at his house at Washington Heights on Monday, February 22, 1875, in the 81st year of his age. He was born at Worthington, Mass., January 7, 1795, and came to New York at the age of fourteen at the suggestion of his cousin Gideon Lee (Mayor of New York in 1833), then a leather dealer in the "Swamp." He soon rose to a partnership in this house, and by his energy and devotion to his business accumulated a sufficient fortune to enable him to retire at the early age of forty. Shortly afterwards, in 1838, he was made President of the Mechanic's Bank, and he served as Chamberlain of the City from 1849 to 1853. He retired from the presidency of the bank in 1873, but continued to take the personal superintendence of his large estate, retaining his energy and vigor unimpaired. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia. He was buried on Thursday, February 25, from Dr. Spring's, or the Brick Church in the Fifth Avenue, of which he had been a member and an officer for many years.

LOVETT.—Robert Lovett, an aged citizen of New York, died on Thursday, December 31, 1874, in the 79th year of his age. His wife Anna died the day before at the age of 80. Mr. Lovett was born in New York in 1795. He was well known for many years as an engraver of seals. He was a skilful, and at one time a celebrated workman; he also took an interest in the science of arms and possessed a competent knowledge of its principles. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, and was buried with his wife from St. Luke's Church in Hudson Street.

VARNUM.—Joseph B. Varnum died at Astoria, L. I., on the 31st of December, 1874, after an illness of four weeks. Mr. Varnum was a grandson of General Varnum of the Revolutionary Army, who served as representative and senator from Massachusetts from 1795 to 1817. Mr. Varnum was born in Washington, D. C., 1818, was graduated at Yale College in 1838, and was admitted to the bar in New York about twenty-five years ago. He was diligent and successful in the practice of his profession, and took an interest in public affairs. He was several times a member of the Assembly, and was chosen speaker at the short session from June to July, 1851. He was also an active member of the celebrated Committee of Seventy.

LIEUT.-COLONEL SAMUEL WARD,

OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

By Col. John Ward, of New York.

(With a Portrait.)

Samuel Ward, fifth child of Governor Samuel Ward, of Rhode Island, and Anne Ray, was born at Westerly in that Colony, Nov. 17, 1756. On both sides he was descended from the celebrated Roger Williams. His ancestor, John Ward, born in 1619, was a cavalry officer in Cromwell's army, and his sword was preserved by his descendants for five generations. He came over to America from Gloucester, England, and settled in Newport, R. I., about 1673, and died there in 1698. His tombstone, and those of his descendants for three generations, may be seen in the old cemetery at Newport. His son, Thomas Ward, born in 1641, left England about 1671; and also settled at Newport, R. I. He was successively elected Treasurer, and a member of both houses of the General Assembly of the Colony. He married, for his second wife, Amy Smith, and died in 1689, leaving two sons by this marriage, the elder of whom, Thomas, died in his thirteenth year, while the younger one, Richard, born in 1689, lived to be a very prominent man in the Colony, becoming Governor of Rhode Island from 1740–43. Gov. Richard Ward married Mary Tillinghast, and died in 1763. His second son, Samuel, born in 1725, after having been a member of the General Assembly of Rhode Island, represented that province,—with Governor Wm. Greene and Mr. John Andrews,—in the Convention called at Hartford in 1758 by the Earl of Loudoun, during the French war, for the purpose of arranging for the defence of the Colonies, and settling their quotas of troops. Subsequently, in 1761, Mr. Ward became Chief Justice of the Colony, and then served several terms as Governor, in 1762, and from 1765–67. On the 15th of June, 1774, he was chosen, together with Stephen Hopkins, by the General Assembly of the Colony, to represent Rhode Island during the first session of the Continental Congress at Philadelphia. Governor Ward's great capacity as a legislator speedily brought him into prominent notice. His private journal of the proceedings of Congress in 1774 and 1775 is full of interest. The session of the first Congress only lasted from Sept. 5th to Oct. 26th, when an adjournment took place; a second Congress being chosen, and meeting at Philadelphia, May 10, 1775. Shortly after this date, while the country was still ringing with the excitement occasioned by the battle of Lexington, the two colleagues, having been re-appointed by the General Assembly of their Colony, again took their seats. Governor Ward, from this time until his death, March 26, 1776, worked unremittingly in the cause of Independence; and, as chairman of the Committee of the Whole, which sat daily, constantly presided over the working sessions of Congress. He was chairman when it was resolved to elect a General for the Continental forces, June 15, 1775, the choice of Congress unanimously falling on Col. George Washington, who was then one of the delegates from Virginia, and had become intimately acquainted with Governor Ward. What is preserved of the subsequent correspondence of Gov. Ward with General Washington is of extreme interest.

Gov. Ward's son, Samuel, the subject of this memoir, was educated at Brown University, in Providence, and was graduated there, with high honors, in 1771. Throughout his youth and early manhood he was an intimate friend of General Nathanael Greene's, and their correspondence is very interesting. Samuel Ward evinced great enthusiasm in the cause of American liberty, and on the 8th of May, 1775, received a commission as Captain of a Company to be raised in Kings and Kent Counties, R. I., "for the preservation of his Majesty's loyal and faithful subjects of the Colony of Rhode Island," a curious retention of previous forms, under an absolute change of circumstances. This commission was signed, under authority of the General Assembly, by Henry Ward, Secretary of Rhode Island, a brother of Gov. Ward's. Captain Ward joined the Rhode Island Army of Observation under General Greene, and was stationed at Cambridge, where General Washington assumed command of the forces besieging Boston on the 3d of July, 1775.

In a letter from General Washington to Governor Samuel Ward, dated at Cambridge, August, 1775, he says: "I did not know till yesterday that you had a son in the army: to-day, I had the pleasure of his company at dinner, together with General Greene,—Colonels Varnum and Hitchcock had already done me that favor,—I think, if occasion should offer, I shall be able to give you a good account of your son, as he seems a sensible, well-informed young man."

Governor Ward acknowledged Gen. Washington's kindness to his son in the following letter:

PHILADELPHIA, 17th Septr., 1775.

DEAR SIR:

Having nothing of immediate consequence to communicate, and determining to set out for this City in a few Days after the Receipt of your favor, I deferred acknowledging it until my arrival here.

I am greatly obliged to you for the very kind notice which you were pleased to take of my son, and the favorable light in which you view him. The advantages of travelling he wants; but those of a liberal Education he enjoys. He has seen some of the best Company in our Colony; and, from his moral and political Principles, I flatter myself his Conduct will make him not unworthy of your future Regard, every Instance of which I shall most gratefully acknowledge.

With Pleasure I observe, that you have lately received some Powder, and expect some Lead and Arms, from our Colony. I hope the measures taken by Congress, and by the Colonies, will furnish you with such Quantities, as will allow the freest Scope to your Military Plans and Operations.

That Part of your Letter relative to removing the Stock from the Islands and Sea-Coast, I laid before our General Assembly. I shewed the necessity of immediately doing it, in the most forcible Terms; and such measures were immediately adopted, as have, I imagine, secured all our Cattle from the Enemy, by this Time.

The innumerable Difficulties which you must have encountered in the Command of an army under different Establishments, in want of Arms and Ammunition, regular Supplies of Provisions, a military Chest, experienced Officers, a due Organization, and a hundred other Things, I have some, though not an adequate Conception of; but, from the Accounts which I have the Pleasure to receive from my Friends in Congress, I doubt not but your wise and steady attention to the Service will surmount all Obstacles, and that, by the opening of the next Campaign, you will have the finest Army under your Command which ever was formed in America.

I am too sensible of the Multiplicity of Business in which you are engaged, to flatter myself with a regular Correspondence; but whenever you shall communicate anything necessary for the public good to me, you may rely upon my best and constant Endeavours, both in our own Colony and in Congress, to promote the Service.

I most cheerfully entered into a solemn Engagement, upon your Appointment, to support you with my Life and Fortune, and shall most religiously, and with the highest Pleasure, endeavour to Discharge that duty. The Congress began to do business last Wednesday, but many Members are still absent. Colo. Lee, Colo. Harrison and Mr. Jefferson, and the North Carolina Delegates, and some others, have not arrived. Mr. Randolph has been confined with a fever two or three Days; Messrs. Wythe and Lee are under Enoculation; so that Colo. Nelson alone attends from your Colony.

We entered into the Consideration of your letters yesterday. For want of a thorough knowledge of military affairs, it was not so well understood, how an Officer's having several Appointments could make any Difference in Rank. For instance, how a General Officer's having a Regiment or Company, or a Field Officer's having a Company, could alter his Rank. It seemed to be the general Opinion, that all Officers should receive Pay only for one Commission, and that their highest; and that when the Army was reformed, no Person should sustain more than one office. But some seemed to apprehend, that if a General Officer appointed by his Colony as Colonel of a particular Regiment, or a Field Officer as Captain of a Company, were refused by the Congress commissions as such, that the Colonies would appoint other Colonels and Captains in their Places. That this increase of Officers would augment the difficulties attending the Reduction of the Troops, if such a Measure should be adopted. Upon the whole, the Matter was referred, and as soon as your several Letters are considered, you will be acquainted with the Sentiments of the Congress.

We have no News here from England later than the 18th of July. By the King's answer to the Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, of the City of London, it appears he is determined to pursue and enforce his Measures. God be thanked, that however severe the Contest may prove, we are now in such a happy way, that the end must be the Establishment of American Liberty.

SAMUEL WARD.

TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

The second commission as Captain, of Governor Ward's cherished son, is dated July 1st, 1775. It is signed by John Hancock, under the authority of Congress, as President of that body, and assigns Captain Samuel Ward to the Twelfth Regiment, commanded by Colonel Varnum.

After remaining all summer at Cambridge and at Prospect Hill (near Charlestown, Mass.), in the American camp,—the monotony being varied by slight skirmishing with the British,—Captain Ward was one of two hundred and fifty of the Rhode Island troops, who volunteered (under Lieut.-Colonel Christopher Greene) to join Colonel Benedict Arnold's command of, altogether, eleven hundred men, directed to join Gen. Montgomery at Quebec, by way of the Kennebec River in Maine. They marched from Prospect Hill, Sept. 10th; the expedition sailing from Newburyport on the 19th of September, and reaching the Kennebec River the following day. Their subsequent march is one of the most terrible on record. The men not being acquainted with the use of bateaux, an immense amount of wading and fording had to be performed. The provisions were strapped in kegs on the backs of the soldiers, and their necessary scantiness produced great suffering.

The force was divided into two divisions, one commanded by Lieut.-Colonel Greene, and the other by Lieut.-Col. Enos. The latter turned back with his command, on arriving at Chaudiere Pond, owing to the great privations they endured. Lieut.-Col. Greene's battalion pressed on bravely to Point Lévi on the St. Lawrence, opposite Quebec, and crossed the river on the night of the 13th of November, encamping near the city. It has been thought that Arnold might then have easily captured Quebec, but what appeared to be the more prudent policy of waiting for the reinforcements under Gen. Montgomery was adopted, and early in the morning of the 20th of November, the Americans marched to Point-aux-Trembles to await the General's arrival. In a letter from the latter point, dated Nov. 26, 1775, Captain Ward gives a vivid account to his family of the hardships of the expedition: "It would take too much time," he says, "to tell you what we have undergone. However, as a summary of the whole, we have gone up one of the most rapid rivers in the world, where the water was so shoal that, moderately speaking, we have waded 100 miles. We were thirty days in a wilderness that none but savages ever attempted to pass. We marched 100 miles upon short, three days' provisions, waded over three rapid rivers, marched through snow and ice barefoot, passed over the St. Lawrence where it was guarded by the enemy's frigates, and are now about twenty-four miles from the city, to recruit our worn-out natures. General Montgomery intends to join us immediately, so that we have a winter's campaign before us; but I trust we shall have the glory of taking Quebec!"

After seizing Montreal, Gen. Montgomery sailed down the St. Lawrence to Point-aux-Trembles, arriving on the second of December, and assuming command. Two days later, the American forces returned to the immediate neighborhood of Quebec. Gen. Carleton, who had evacuated Montreal, was now in command of the British forces in Quebec, and prepared for a vigorous defence. The Americans arrived before the city on the fifth of December, and spent the month in preparations for an assault.

The attack was finally made early in the morning of the 31st of December, under cover of a very heavy snow storm, Gen. Montgomery assailing the defences protecting the road at the base of Cape Diamond, with the New York troops, so as to reach the lower town; Col. Livingston attacking St. John's Gate; while Col. Arnold's command, approaching from the North side on the St. Charles river, attacked the first barrier defending the lower town on that side, in face of a fire of artillery, Capt. Ward's company occupying about the centre of the forces; and after an hour's fighting carried the barrier, and captured the battery, making sixty prisoners. Col. Arnold being wounded at the beginning of the attack, Captain Morgan with his company led the advance, and reached the second barrier, making more prisoners. Owing to the wetting of their muskets the Americans were unable to take the second barrier, which was strongly defended, and after fighting for three hours more, protecting themselves by occupying the houses on the narrow street, were all made prisoners, in turn, near Hope Gate; a force sent by Gen. Carleton attacking them in the rear. They were kindly treated during their captivity; but, the death of their beloved General Montgomery, who was killed by the random discharge of a British cannon during his gallant attack on the block-house at the foot of Cape Diamond, added much to the sufferings incident to their position.

Captain Ward was still a prisoner when his father Gov. Ward died, and remained so until August, 1776, when he was released on parole, the American prisoners being sent by sea to New York on the 11th of August. He was exchanged before the close of the year. Towards the middle of November he visited Fort Washington on New York island, in company with General Greene, shortly before the fall of that fort. Among the garrison Captain Ward recognized a number of those who had turned back from the expedition to Quebec. They are said to have shrunk back on seeing him.

On the 1st of January, 1777, Captain Ward was promoted Major in the First Regiment from Rhode Island (sometimes known as the "Ninth Foot, in the Continental Army"), commanded by Colonel Christopher Greene. His commission was signed by Henry Laurens, President of Congress, Jan. 5, 1778. From April to June, 1777, the regiment was stationed at Morristown, New Jersey, in Washington's army; forming part of General Varnum's brigade. On the 2d of July, General Washington writes to Gov. Trumbull, that he has ordered General Parsons' and General Varnum's brigades to march off with all despatch towards Peekskill, in order to allow four of the strongest Massachusetts regiments at that point to reinforce Ticonderoga, which was threatened by Gen. Burgoyne. Washington anticipated that the next step of Gen. Howe's army would be towards Peekskill, "in order to get possession of the passes in the Highlands," and wished to prevent such a movement. Major Ward accompanied his regiment on this march, crossing the Hudson, and remaining encamped at Peekskill until after the close of August, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Comstock. The last letter that reached Major Ward at this point is dated August 31st. Brig.-General James Clinton commanded the fortifications at the Highlands, and his name is attached to the muster rolls of the First Rhode Island Regiment.

During September the regiment, with the rest of Gen. Varnum's brigade, marched southward, after recrossing the Hudson, to reinforce Washington's army near Philadelphia. Washington mentions this detachment from Peekskill as about twelve hundred strong. On the 7th of October, General Washington wrote to General Varnum, who was near Coryell's Ferry on the march, directing him to detach Col. Greene's and Col. Angell's regiments for the defence of Fort Mercer, at Red Bank on the Delaware river. Washington's letter of instructions to Colonel Greene is full of interest. He says: "Sir, I have directed General Varnum to send your regiment and that of Colonel Angell to Red Bank, by a route which has been marked out to him. The command of that detachment will of course devolve upon you, with which you will proceed with all expedition, and throw yourself into that place. When you arrive there, you will immediately communicate your arrival to Colonel Smith, commander of the garrison at Fort Mifflin, and Commodore Hazlewood, commander of the fleet in the river. You are to co-operate with them in every measure necessary for the defence of the obstructions in the river, and to counteract every attempt the enemy may make for their removal. You will find a very good fortification at Red Bank; but if anything should be requisite to render it stronger, or proportion it to the size of your garrison, you will have it done. The cannon you will stand in need of, as much as can be spared, will be furnished from the galleys and Fort Mifflin, from whence also you will derive supplies of military stores. I have sent Captain Duplessis, with some officers and men, to take the immediate direction of the artillery, for your garrison. He is also to superintend any works that may be wanted. If there should be any deficiency of men for the artillery, the security of the garrison will require you to assist them with a few additional ones from your detachment. You should not lose a moment's time in getting to the place of your destination, and making every proper preparation for its defence. Any delay might give the enemy an opportunity of getting there before you, which could not fail of being most fatal in its consequences. If in the progress of your march you should fall in with any detachment of the enemy, bending towards the same object, and likely to gain it before you, and from intelligence should have reason to think yourself equal to the task, you will by all means attack them, and endeavour by that means to disappoint their design. I have written to General Newcomb, of the Jersey militia, to give you all the aid in his power, for which you will accordingly apply when necessary. Upon the whole, Sir, you will be pleased to remember, that the post with which you are now intrusted is of the utmost importance to America, and demands every exertion of which you are capable for its security and defence. The whole defence of the Delaware absolutely depends upon it, and consequently all the enemy's hopes of keeping Philadelphia, and finally succeeding in the object of the present campaign. Influenced by these considerations, I doubt not your regard to the service, and your own reputation, will prompt you to every possible effort to accomplish the important end of your trust, and frustrate the intentions of the enemy.—Given at Headquarters, this 7th day of October, 1777."—Colonel Greene accordingly marched to this important position, taking command of the two regiments, which, in numbers, only amounted o four hundred men, but were a gallant band of soldiers. Fort Mercer was situated on the east bank of the Delaware, and had originally been a much larger fortification, but the French engineer officer mentioned in Washington's letter of instructions, Plessis de Mauduit, reduced the earthworks to the form of a pentagon mounting fourteen cannon, and abandoned the outer line of works as useless.

On the evening of the 21st of October, twelve hundred Hessians, under the brave Count Donop, crossed the river from Philadelphia, and marched to Haddonfield. The following morning, the eventful 22d of October, they marched before dawn to attack Fort Mercer; but being delayed by the prompt action of the guard at Timber Creek, who removed the lower bridge, they were obliged to cross by one four miles above, and did not reach the neighbourhood of the fort until about noon. The Americans awaited their approach with great coolness. Colonel Greene mounted the ramparts, and paced up and down, spy-glass in hand, to encourage his men, advising them to aim at the enemy's broad waist belts. Major Ward has been described on this occasion by Geo. W. Greene in the following words: "There, was young Samuel Ward, who had followed him" (Col. Greene) "to Cambridge and Quebec as Captain, and now stood by his side as his Major, slender, but tall, vigorous and erect, with a keen flash in his eye, and immovable firmness on his lip and brow."* After a summons to surrender, coupled with a threat that no quarter would be given, which was received with proper scorn, the Hessians, at a quarter to 5 P. M., opened a brisk fire with their cannon, and then advanced to the attack in two columns. Finding the outer works unguarded, they rushed on with loud huzzas to the terrible doom that awaited them. The Americans reserved their fire until the right moment, and then delivered it with fearful effect.

Closing up their broken ranks, the first column reached the abatis, and commenced tearing away the branches; but the fire was so deadly that they at last moved toward the river, and there subjected themselves to a cross fire, which was very destructive. The other column attacked the fort toward the south, and met with such a severe reception, that finally all who survived retreated in confusion to Haddonfield. Some four hundred Hessians lay dead and wounded on the field. Their commander, Count Donop, came into action in full uniform, and behaved very gallantly, but was soon mortally wounded in the thigh. He lay buried under heaps of slain until rescued by the garrison, to die three days later.

Major Ward wrote the official report of this memorable battle, in which he had bravely sustained his part. It was addressed to General Washington, and is as follows:

"October 23d. By the desire of Colonel Greene, I congratulate your Excellency on the success of the troops under his command yesterday. On the 21st instant, four battalions of Germans, amounting to about twelve hundred men, commanded by Count Donop, landed at Cooper's Ferry, and marched the same evening to Haddonfield. At three o'clock yesterday morning they marched for this place. When the guard at Timber Creek Bridge were informed of their approach, they took up that bridge, and the enemy filed off to the left, and crossed a bridge four miles above. Their advanced parties were discovered within four miles of the fort at twelve o'clock. At half after four in the afternoon they sent a flag to summon the fort The reply was that it should never be surrendered. At three-quarters past four they began a brisk cannonade, and soon after advanced in two columns to the attack. They passed the abatis, gained the ditch, and some few got over the pickets; but the fire was so heavy, that they were soon driven out again with considerable loss; and they retreated precipitately towards Haddonfield. The enemy's loss amounts to one lieutenant-colonel, three captains, four lieutenants, and near seventy (of the rank and file) killed; and Count Donop, his brigade-major, a captain, lieutenant, and upwards of seventy non-commissioned officers and privates wounded and taken prisoners. We are also informed that several wagons are taken. The Colonel proposes to send the wounded officers to Burlington. He also enjoins me to tell your Excellency, that both officers and men behaved with the greatest bravery. The action lasted forty minutes."

The total loss of the British was subsequently reported to Congress as 400 men.

General Washington replied as follows:

"Headquarters, 24th October, 1777.

To Colonel Christopher Greene:

SIR:—I have just received a letter from Major Ward, written by your desire, giving an account of your success over the enemy on the 22d instant. I heartily congratulate you upon this happy event, and beg you will accept my most particular thanks, and present the same to your whole garrison, both officers and men. Assure them, that their gallantry and good behaviour meet my warmest approbation. All the prisoners should be immediately removed to a distance from your post, to some convenient and safe place.

* Life of General Greene by G. W. Greene, Vol. 1st, Page 490.

I am sorry you have thought of sending the officers to Burlington, as they would be in no kind of security at that place, but might be taken and carried off by the enemy with the greatest ease. Immediately on the receipt of this, you will be pleased to have all the prisoners, both officers and men, conveyed to Morristown. The wounded can be accommodated in the hospitals there and in its neighbourhood. Count Donop in particular is a man of importance, and ought by all means to be taken care of. With respect to the arms you have taken, as they are no doubt good, it will be well to exchange all the indifferent arms you may have for them; but after that is done, I would recommend to you to send all your superfluous arms away. They can be put in the wagons, that are on the way to you with ammunition.

I am Sir, &c."

Colonel Greene's gallantry and success were recognized by a vote of thanks on the part of Congress, an elegant sword being ordered to be presented to him.

On the nineteenth of November, Colonel Greene wrote to General Washington, whose headquarters were at Whitemarsh, giving an account of the state of affairs at Fort Mercer, which was in a very critical condition since the fall of Fort Mifflin, three days previously; the enemy being able to concentrate their entire attention upon Red Bank, the American fleet in the river having been destroyed.

Colonel Greene was anxious to hold the post his gallant garrison had defended with such extreme bravery against overwhelming odds on the memorable twenty-second of October, and sent the letter by Major Ward, who also personally informed General Washington of the condition of the place, as Lord Cornwallis was threatening the rear of the position with a large force, which, as was already known to Washington, had marched from Philadelphia to Chester on the seventeenth of November, and had crossed the Delaware. As Fort Mercer now alone prevented the British ships from passing up the Delaware to Philadelphia, it was desirable to continue holding the fortification if possible; but it had now become untenable, and on the evening of the 20th, Col. Greene, in compliance with the advice of his immediate superiors, evacuated the fort, contrary to his own wish. As the British army had for some time occupied Philadelphia, the army under General Washington went into winter quarters at Valley Forge, where the sufferings and privations the soldiers encountered that terrible winter, were nobly sustained. Major Ward accompanied his regiment, and remained at Valley Forge until about February, 1778, when he went home to Rhode Island on furlough, and married Phebe Greene, eldest daughter of Governor William Greene, of that State. The marriage took place at Warwick, R. I., March 8, 1778, and, at the expiration of a month, the bridegroom returned to Valley Forge, crossing the Hudson near West Point, so as to avoid the British ships.

During the month of May, 1778, Col. Christopher Greene and Major Ward,—Lieut.-Col. Comstock having resigned,—went home to Rhode Island, to raise a colored regiment, the remains of their gallant command being consolidated with Colonel Angell's regiment. The new command was successfully organized, and did good service during the remainder of the war, retaining the designation of the First Rhode Island Regiment. It was attached to Major-General Sullivan's command, and stationed at East Greenwich, Rhode Island, on the mainland. Col. Greene now became acting Brigadier-General, and Major Ward assumed command of his regiment during the ensuing movements. On the 9th of August following,

LIBRARY
NEW YORK

Gen. Sullivan's army crossed from Tiverton to Rhode Island proper, to attack the enemy's fortifications at Newport, expecting the co-operation of the French fleet under Count D'Estaing. The British had evacuated their forts on the north end of the island, anticipating Sullivan's approach; and the French fleet soon landed four thousand men to join him, under the Marquis de Lafayette, who now for a time commanded the left wing of the army, Major-Gen. Nath. Greene commanding the right wing, while the celebrated John Hancock held a subordinate command as Major-General. A letter of Major Ward's describes the army as encamped at Middletown, R. I., Aug. 18, 1778, and frequently exchanging shots with the British, who were thoroughly fortified in their position. The French fleet had sailed out to engage the British ships, taking their troops with them. He hopes that the fleet will soon return, and describes the American army as engaged in throwing up intrenchments, expecting to return the enemy's cannonade the following day. He writes the next day: "We drove the enemy from a small battery, killing and wounding several of them." The capture of Newport was confidently expected, as the French fleet was relied upon to cover the landing of American troops in rear of the British works, which were remarkably strong, with but one narrow approach. But Admiral D'Estaing's vessels having been crippled in a storm, he sailed to Boston with the entire fleet, and British vessels soon after arriving to reinforce General Pigot, General Sullivan retreated on the evening of the 28th of August, to the northern part of the island, where he had caused strong fortifications to be prepared. The British army followed, and on the 29th, a sharp engagement ensued, in which the Americans gained a decisive victory. During the 30th, both armies kept up a steady cannonading, but, in the evening, the American forces retreated in good order to Tiverton, on the mainland, without any loss. Major Ward commanded his regiment during the engagement and the subsequent retreat, behaving with great coolness and gallantry, and animating the colored levies by his great personal courage, as is shown in General Sullivan's orders complimenting the regiment after the battle. Major Ward writes on the 30th: "The army retreated the evening of the 28th. Early yesterday morning, the enemy moved out after us, expecting that we were leaving the island, and took possession of the Heights in our front. They sent out parties in their front, and we made detachments to drive them back again. After a skirmish of three or four hours, with various success, in which each party gave way three or four times, and were reinforced, we drove them quite back to the ground they first took in the morning, and have continued there ever since. Two ships and a couple of small vessels beat up opposite our lines, and fired several shots; but, being pretty briskly fired upon from our heavy pieces, they fell down, and now lay opposite the enemy's lines. Our loss was not very great; it has not been ascertained yet; and I can hardly make a tolerable conjecture. Several officers fell, and several are badly wounded. I am so happy as to have only one captain slightly wounded in the hand. I believe that a couple of the blacks were killed, and four or five wounded, but none badly. Previous to this, I should have told you that our picquets and the light corps engaged their advance, and fought them with bravery." General Sullivan received the thanks of Congress for his masterly evacuation of Rhode Island.

After General Sullivan's retreat, the First Rhode Island Regiment, under Colonel Greene, was stationed at East Greenwich during the ensuing season. Major Ward remained with his regiment, and, on the twelfth of April, 1779, was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Lieut.-Col. Comstock, his rank, accordingly, dating from May 26, 1778. His commission was signed by John Jay, President of Congress. In October, 1779, Newport was evacuated by the British. Colonel Greene's regiment remained at East Greenwich, and, at the beginning of January 1780, Lieut.-Colonel Ward was ordered on detached duty to Providence, to take command of a Light Corps, previously commanded by Colonel Barton. He gave great satisfaction in his new position, as is shown by General Cornell's letters. Having been appointed on a committee to represent the Officers of the Rhode Island Line, with regard to the depreciation of the Continental currency, he exerted himself before the General Assembly, so as to carry his point, and regulate the officers' pay to their satisfaction. He was stationed at North Kingston and at Newport during the remainder of the year, and was very active in preparing the levies for the field.

On the first day of January, 1781, a large number of the officers of the Rhode Island Line retired on half pay, it becoming necessary to reduce the number of officers. The gallant Colonel Angell retired at this time, and Lieut.-Colonel Ward came next on the list. A copy of Horace, which Col. Ward carried with him through the Revolution, is still preserved, as also his sword. A committee of three having been appointed by the General Assembly in November, 1780, to examine the abstracts of the several brigades of Rhode Island Militia, with regard to their service in July of that year, Lieut.-Col. Ward was appointed on this committee, reporting in January, 1781. The following May, he had the misfortune to lose one of his best friends, Col. Christopher Greene being killed by the British near Croton River, N. Y.

Lieut.-Col. Ward now went into business as a merchant, at Warwick, R. I., displaying great energy in his new career. In 1784 he became a member of the Rhode Island branch of the Society of the Cincinnati. In 1786 he was sent to Annapolis as a delegate to the Convention called to regulate commerce between the different States. On this occasion he visited Virginia. In 1788 he made a voyage from Providence to Canton, by way of Madeira, Pondicherry, Madras, etc. The ship was called the George Washington, and was among the first to display the American flag in the China seas. This voyage occupied considerably over a year, and Lt.-Col. Ward kept a careful journal, which shows his close attention to business. Upon his return to the United States, in 1789, he resumed business in Rhode Island. In 1790 he made a voyage to England, Holland, etc., and on his return established himself in New York as a merchant, under the firm name of Samuel Ward & Brother. In 1792–3 he again visited England and France on business, and being in Paris when Louis XVI. was condemned to death, he went to Versailles with General Lafayette, to avoid the spectacle of the execution. He returned to New York on the first of August, 1793, and continued to reside there, engaged in business, until 1804, when he removed to East Greenwich, R. I. The following year he made a voyage to Bermuda. He was elected President of the New York Marine Insurance Company, Nov. 12, 1806, and returned to New York to accept this position, which he filled until the close of 1808, when he returned to East Greenwich, where he owned a farm. He went as a delegate to the celebrated Hartford Convention in 1814, but had no sympathy with the extremists, and did his best to procure the triumph of moderate counsels, and to strengthen the National cause. In 1816, with a view of being near his children, several of whom had embarked in business in New York, he removed from Rhode Island to Jamaica, on Long Island, N. Y., and resided there until 1828, when he returned to New York City, where his wife died Oct. 11th of the same year. He survived her until August 16, 1832, when he passed away at No. 7 Bond St., New York, after a noble and useful life. He was pronounced to have been "a ripe classical scholar, a gentleman of most winning urbanity of manners, and a man of sterling intellect and unblemished honor." [1]

NOTE.—The letters from General Washington quoted in this article are principally taken from the fifth volume of his correspondence, edited by Mr. Sparks.

THE WARD FAMILY.

The name of WARD, or WARDE, *is of Norman origin, and found on the ancient Roll of Battle Abbey, England, as given by Duchesne, Holinshed, and Leland. Amy Smith (a granddaughter of Roger Williams). He settled at Newport soon after 1670, and is first mentioned in Rhode Island history in May, 1671, and subsequently in 1677, when he was elected General Treasurer of the Colony. He was elected to the upper house of the General Assembly as Assistant, equivalent to a modern Senator, in 1679, and was repeatedly chosen a Deputy from Newport until his death, September 25, 1689, aged 48. Backus (History Baptists, 1, 516) says that he was a Baptist, and a very useful man in the Colony of Rhode Island. His widow (Amy) afterwards married Arnold Collins, and their son Henry Collins (called by the late Dr. Benjamin Waterhouse "the Lorenzo de Medicis of Rhode Island"), born March 25, 1699, died at Newport, R. I., about 1770.—Issue:

NOTES ON THE HISTORY OF THE DEWEY FAMILY IN AMERICA.

By Benjamin W. Dwight.

[Sheffield, Mass., now Gr. Barrington, was granted by "The General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay in New England," Jan. 30, 1722, to Joseph Parsons and 176 others as Colonial Proprietors, and purchased by them from the Mohekanaw or Stockbridge Indians, April 25, 1724. Joseph Parsons and many of his fellow-purchasers were from Westfield, Mass. Among the first 55 actual settlers, whose title-deeds were made out and delivered in July, 1733, was Israel Dewey, Senior. The grants were from 250 to 1,000 acres to each person. At the first town-meeting in Jan. 1733, a meeting-house was ordered to be built, and it was completed (35 by 45 feet) in 1735. Rev. Jonathan Hubbard was settled as their pastor, June 26, 1735, and continued such for 29 years.]

He was authorized by vote of the town, about 1762, to build a grist-mill and saw-mill on the falls of the Housatonic (in the present village of Gr. Barrington) and land and water-power were granted to him for the purpose, "so long as he should maintain his mills for the accommodation of the public." He built the mills and kept them running for many years. He is said to have had quite a spirited and ably conducted correspondence with the Rev. Dr. Samuel Hopkins, at that time of Gr. Barrington, and afterwards of Newport, R. I., on some doctrinal points of difference between them. The originals of their extended and voluminous correspondence were preserved until within a recent period, but are now lost or destroyed. From Israel Dewey the Gr. Barrington and Lenox Deweys are descended.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

BARD.—Can any of your readers give a complete list of the daughters of Peter Bard, Senior, who was buried at Burlington, New Jersey, Dec. 2d, 1769? Whom did he marry?

S. W. P.

BEACH.—I am indebted to the Rev. Abraham Beach Carter, D.D., of New York, for the following particulars respecting his grandfather, the Rev. Abraham Beach, D.D., minister of Trinity Church, N. Y., from 1784 to 1813. See my query on this subject in the January number of THE RECORD.

Dr. Beach was born in Cheshire, Conn., 9 Sept., 1740: he died at "The Farm," New Brunswick, New Jersey, 14 Sept., 1828. He married at New Brunswick, in the Spring of 1770, Anna Van Winkle [d., New York, 24 Jan., 1808], dau. of Evert Van Winkle, "one of the early Dutch settlers in New Jersey."

He was a son of Capt. Elnathan Beach, descended from the family who came from Kingston-upon-Hull, Yorkshire, England, and settled in New Haven, Conn., in 1637. Elnathan died at Cheshire, Conn., 16 Aug., 1742, greatly distinguished for his benevolence and many excellent virtues—"So as to deserve a particular place in the memory of all who wish well to mankind." (Inscription still legible on his tombstone, in churchyard at Cheshire.) He married a Wooster, sister of Brig.-Gen. David Wooster, of the Revolutionary Army.

A fine portrait of the Rev. Dr. Beach is in the possession of Dr. Carter.

Can any of your readers help me to the parentage of Capt. Elnathan Beach and of his wife? What was the latter's Christian name?

S. W. P.

KOLLOCK.—Magdalen Kollock [d. 27 March, 1790, aged 67, and bur. in cem. of Epis. ch. of St. James, Bristol, Penn.], whom Balch [Prov. Hist. of Penn.] calls "of Delaware," m. (1) Jaspar M'Call [d. 1647], merchant, of Philadelphia, s. of George M'Call by his wife Ann, dau. of Jaspar Yeates, member of the Provincial Council. She m. (2) John Swift, of Philadelphia [s. of John and Mary (White) Swift], Collector of the Port and for many years member of the City Council, and had inter al. Alice [d. at New York, 1818], who had for her first husband, Robert Cambridge Livingston, s. of Robert Livingston, third lord of the manor.

Wanted, any information concerning the ancestry of Magdalen Kollock, in the line of either parent.

THOMPSON.—William Thompson, "a captain in Lee's legion during the Revolutionary War, and afterwards a major," s. of Gen. Anthony Thompson, of Pittsburgh, Penn., m. Sarah Falls, wid. of —— M'Call. Their dau., Anna Maria Martina Thompson [d. 14 Oct., 1838, aged 52], m. at Newark, N. J., 25 Sept., 1806, John Swift Livingston, s. of Robert Cambridge and Alice [Swift] Livingston.

Further genealogical information is desired concerning Gen. Anthony Thompson, and his s. William, and their wives. Was the former bro. to Brig.-Gen William Thompson, of the Revolutionary army?

S. W. P.

LISPENARD.—Abigail Lispenard [b. 4 Dec. 1739, d. 3 Feb., 1806] m. Israel Underhill, of Westchester, N. Y., by license dated 4 March, 1761. See Bolton's History of the County of Westchester, I., 115: II., 228, 530. Who were her parents?

HONEYWELL.—Nathaniel Underhill, father of the Israel Underhill just mentioned, m. Mary, dau. of Israel Honeywell. Whom did Israel Honeywell marry, and what were the names of his parents?

S. W. P.

ODELL.—The address of Mr. Eugene Odell, whose name appears in THE RECORD of April last, is Yonkers, Westchester Co., New York.

SKIDMORE.—Since writing my query on this subject, in the January number of THE RECORD, I have ascertained that Samuel Skidmore, of Jamaica, father of Phœbe Skidmore, the wife of Hendrick Suydam, married Mary Gray, or Grey [b. 20 Dec., 1710; d. 27 Nov., 1781], daughter, I think, of John Gray, "of Jamaica, yeoman," whose will, signed 10 Feb., 1723, was proved at New York 4 June, 1724.

Samuel Skidmore [who was born in 1709, and died at Flushing, L. I., 13 April, 1781 or 1782] was probably, if he died in 1781, a son of John Skidmore, of Hempstead, who, in his will, dated 3 Jan., 1782, mentions his wife Elizabeth [Whitehead?] and the children of his son Samuel, deceased.

John Skidmore, of Hempstead, was a son of Samuel Skidmore, of Jamaica, who married Susannah ——, and died in 1733. The latter was a son of John Skidmore, of Jamaica, whose will, signed 15 Feb., 1670, mentions his father Thomas, of Fairfield, Ct.

I shall be glad to receive, through THE RECORD, any addition to this pedigree, or any correction of its statements. S. W. P.

SWIFT.—Alice Swift married, 1st, Robert Cambridge Livingston, son of the third lord of the manor; and, 2d, James Crawford, Colonel of the Guards, Equerry to the Queen, and Governor of Bermuda.

She was a daughter of John and Magdalen Swift, of Philadelphia, and granddaughter of John and Mary (White) Swift, of the same city, so we learn from Balch's Provincial History of Pennsylvania.

Wanted: The date of her birth, the date of her death, the date of her marriage with Livingston, the maiden name of her mother, and the dates of birth and death of both John Swift. S. W. P.

THONG.—I should be glad to have any information concerning Walter Thong, merchant, of this city, beyond the slight mention of him in the Colonial History of New York. He was licensed to marry Sarah Van Dam, 16 Oct., 1704. (See Liber VII., New York City Wills.) He appears to have subsequently married Catalyntie (Catryntie?), daughter of the well known Rip Van Dam—President of the Council, and some time Governor of the Province of New York—by whom he had a daughter Mary, who became the wife of Robert Livingston, third lord of the manor. (Col. Hist. of N. Y., VI., 153.) What was the date of this second marriage?

VAN DAM.—When did Sarah Van Dam, first wife of Walter Thong, die? Was she a sister of his second wife? We know that Rip Van Dam had a daughter Sarah, who was baptized in New York, 31 Oct., 1686.

THOMPSON.—John Swift Livingston, son of Robert Cambridge Livingston, married Anna M. M. Thompson. Any information concerning her ancestry would be of service to me. S. W. P.

WAREING.—Edmund Wareing took to wife Elizabeth Bouton, daughter of Sergeant John Bouton, at Norwalk, Ct., 6 Oct., 1698. See Hall's History of Norwalk, p. 194.

Information is desired concerning the parentage of Edmund Wareing, or Warren, as his descendants now write it. Could he have been a son of John Warren, of Lloyd's Neck and Brookhaven, L. I.? S. W. P.

CORRECTION.

FIELDSTON, RIVERDALE P. O., N. Y.
April 28, 1875.

Pub. Com. N. Y. Gen. and B. Record.

DEAR SIR: I regret that a communication contributed by me and printed on p. 73, April No., 1875, has been so revised that the statements as given are incorrect, and yet, notwithstanding the change made, my name is given as authority. Please let the next number make amends.

Lines 12 and 13 from the foot of p. 73 should read: "1st. Col. Pieter Schuyler, who had two sons and one dau. Margaretta, who m. Robert Livingston (the nephew, or head of the elder branch of the Livingstons in this country)."

This Robert Livingston, known in family history as "the nephew," was a son of James Livingston, who was one of the older sons of Rev. John Livingston. He had two, possibly three, older brothers, viz., John, born 30 June,* 1636, in Ireland, and William, born 7 January, 1638, at Lanark, Scotland. Robert, "the uncle," or first proprietor of the manor of Livingston, was the seventh and youngest child of Rev. John Livingston by his wife, the eldest dau. of Bartholonew Fleeming, merchant, of Edinburgh.

Yours very resp'y,

MATURIN L. DELAFIELD.

NOTES ON BOOKS.

COLONIAL RECORDS OF VIRGINIA. Senate Document. Extra. Richmond, Va. : R. F. WALKER, Superintendent of Public Printing. 1874.

After the surrender of the Confederate forces in April, 1865, many official documents were removed from the State archives of Virginia, including four volumes of manuscripts obtained in England, and a portfolio of maps. These, if they can be traced, should be restored. Some duplicates have been obtained. And the Library Committee of the two Houses have favored the printing of an instalment of historical records, trusting, as they well might, that these "will be acceptable to the students of our early history," etc. They are from the Public Record Office of Great Britain.

I. The Proceedings of the First Assembly of Virginia, held July 30th, 1619. Sir George Yeardley arrived as Governor in April, 1619; and "sente his summons all over "the country, as well to invite those of the counsell of Estate that were absente, as also "for the election of Burgesses." These met on 30 July. But the Record was long given up as hopelessly lost. It was found by Mr. Bancroft, in 1856, and is now first published. It is in the form of a report by the Speaker, who was also Secretary. There were eleven places which elected two Burgesses each. Three were called cities, viz., James, Charles, and Henricus; three were called "hundreds," after the old English style, and five seem to have been plantations. Proceedings were opened by prayer and very regularly conducted. A commission was read "for establishing the Counsell of Estate and the "General Assembly." Committees were appointed and reported, and many laws and regulations adopted, besides several Petitions to England. We can only note a few. The Governor, in reference to a Petition, said "that in these doubtful times between us and "the Indians, it would behoove us not to make as large distances between plantation and "plantation as ten miles, but for our more strength and security, to draw nearer to-"gether." The price of the best tobacco was fixed at 3s. and of the second best at 18d. the pounde; and it was made a legal tender "for commodities or upon billes" to the Cape merchant. Ministers were to read divine service and exercise their functions "ac-"cording to the Ecclesiastical laws and orders of the Churche of England." And all persons whatsoever "upon the Sabaoth day shall frequente divine service and sermons both "forenoon and afternoon, and all such as bear arms shall bring their pieces, swordes, "poulder and shotte." Penalty 3s. a time, or if a servant, "bodily punishment." The session lasted until August 4. Every man in the colony above 16, was to contribute one pound of the best tobacco for distribution to the Speaker, Clerk, Sergeant and Marshal.

II. The next in order of date is "a true list of the names of all those that were mas-"sacred by the treachery of the savages in Virginia, the 22 March last," i.e., 1622. The number which fell amounted to 347. We have here their names, and the places where they were killed. It has before been copied, but it is so useful in accounting for many that it was well to reprint it.

III. "A list of the names of the dead in Virginia since April last" (1622) up to Feby. 16, 1623. This also gives the names, generally in full, and the places.

IV. "List of the Livinge . . . in Virginia, Feby. 16th, 1623." This seems a full list, and generally with full names, specifying 23 different places where the persons resided, and giving 1,277 names. This is the solid foundation for a genealogical sketch of all the surviving founders of Virginia, is a very important list, and it has many branches in New York. The names are nearly all familiar. Indeed, quite too much so. For when we claim them by the lump, there are so many, we have to drop the whole, we cannot believe we own them all. The editor informs us they are generally stripped of any middle name. We must thefefore wait until our Virginia friends make their proofs of property, or selection, before we claim. It seems there were then but 22 negroes.

* Not January, as I have seen it stated.

V. The next document printed is "A Briefe Declaration of the Plantation of Virginia "during the first twelve years, when Sir Thomas Smith was Governor of the Companie, "and downe to this present tyme By the ancient Planters now remaining alive in "Virginia;" not dated; but about 1624 and between 1622 and 1625. The massacre is recited in it; showing it was after that date, and it was placed on the English calendar among the papers of 1625. It was mentioned in 1624. Mr. Bancroft had a MS. copy.

VI. A census list in 1634 gives the whole number 4,914 in 8 divisions; no names. The colony had quadrupled in about 10 years. The names, we hope, will be hunted up.

VII. A letter of K. Chas. 2d to Sir W. Berkeley, Gov. of Va., by mistake is dated 1648 instead of 1688. It is not of much importance.

VIII. "A list of the Parishes in Virginia, June the 30th, 1680," twenty in number, with the names of the incumbents, 37 in number. After this date we might expect genealogical traces with some accuracy.

The Editor has favored us with a romantic sketch of Capt. Henry Spelman, 3d son of the noted antiquary.

The whole publication shows the right spirit started. C. B. M.

"A Genealogy of Runnels and Reynolds Families in America, with Records and Brief Memorials of the Earliest Ancestors as far as known, and of many of their descendants, bearing the same and other names. Appendix "B." Genealogical notices of other Reynolds families originating in New England.

Appendix "C." Genealogical Notices of Reynolds families that settled in America outside of New England.

Appendix "D." Genealogical Notices of other Runnels families in New Hampshire.

Appendix "E." Notices of other Runnels families in Maine.

Appendix "F." A Genealogy of Valentine Runnels, in Massachusetts.

Appendix "G." Miscellaneous notes on a few others, as yet unconnected with the foregoing families.

The book also contains a "Roll of Honor," embracing the names of all the descendants of the different families of Runnels or Reynolds who have engaged in our wars from the early Colonial times. The genealogy will be most valuable in future years to the descendants of these families, as in no event can the present record be lost, and it may lead many of those bearing the name of Runnels or Reynolds to identify themselves with a common origin. Notice.—A communication from Osgood Field, Esq., of London, relative to the family of Field, also a paper by Edward F. de Lancey, Esq., containing important corrections and additions to the "Cruger Family Records," designed for the present number of The Record, but unavoidably deferred, will appear in the October issue.

VOL. VI. NEW YORK, OCTOBER, 1875. No. 4.

THE LIFE AND CHARACTER OF THE LATE REV. HENRY EGLINTON MONTGOMERY, D.D., RECTOR OF THE CHURCH OF THE INCARNATION, NEW YORK.

BY JAMES E. MONTGOMERY, M.A.

THE Rev. Henry Eglinton Montgomery, D.D., was born in the City of Philadelphia on the 9th of December, 1820. He was the second son of John Crathorne and Elizabeth Henrietta (Philips) Montgomery. His father, who died in 1867, was an acknowledged type of the true gentleman of the old school, and in his noble bearing, high-toned character and polished manners, well sustained the honor and dignity of the ancient family from which he sprung. He was descended from a long line of distinguished ancestry, his pedigree extending back in an unbroken chain to the middle of the 9th century, and furnishing repeated evidences of the fact that from the sixth count Roger de Montgomerie, who accompanied William of Normandy to England in 1066, and led the van of his army at the famous Battle of Hastings—for which he was created Earl of Shrewsbury, Chichester and Arundel—down through succeeding generations for several centuries, the name has been conspicuous and distinguished in many of the principal events of English and Scottish history.

The first representative of the family who settled in America was William Montgomerie, of Brigend, Ayrshire,—was at one time heir to the title and honors of the Earldom of Eglinton,—who crossed the ocean with his family in 1701–2, and settled at "Eglinton," on Doctors Creek, Monmouth County, New Jersey.

The mother of Dr. Montgomery died July 11th, 1850, in the 53d year of her age. To great personal beauty and accomplishments Mrs. Montgomery united in her character the sweeter charms of an exemplary Christian life, and a thorough devotion to domestic ties and duties. She was the only daughter of Henry and Sophia Philips, the former of Bank Hall, County Lancaster, England, and the latter, a daughter of Benjamin Chew, Chief-Justice of Pennsylvania (the last who held office under the English Crown), who resided at "Cleveden," Germantown, the scene of the Revolutionary battle of that name. The old mansion, which was occupied by the British troops during that hotly contested action, is still occupied by the family, and forms one of the most interesting and conspicuous landmarks connected with our War of Independence.

Miss Sophia Chew was quite noted in the annals of our early history as a nation. She was a celebrated beauty, and is frequently introduced in the "Republican Court" as one of the prominent belles of that eventful, chivalrous period, and, with her sister, Mrs. Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, was a special favorite of Washington. This brief genealogical record of the family will serve as a fitting introduction to the life and character of one of the most beloved and respected of its many descendants.

Owing to the removal of his parents to "Eglinton," their country-seat, on the banks of the Hudson, and their protracted residence there during his childhood, Dr. Montgomery's early education was entrusted to private instruction, but he proved so apt and proficient that, when placed at Professor Espy's school in Philadelphia, he took and maintained an advanced position, and made a rapid and gratifying progress in his academic career.

At the age of fifteen (15) he entered the University of Pennsylvania, whence he graduated after a full course in the year 1839, winning the second place in his class and the "Valedictory Oration," then considered the most distinguished collegiate honor. His address upon the occasion was a most beautiful effort, and fully confirmed the opinions which had been formed concerning his gifted powers as an orator. His farewell to college life was couched in chaste and touching language, and produced a marked effect upon his hearers. Immediately after his graduation he entered the law office of his cousin, the Hon. Joseph R. Ingersoll, then one of the brilliant lights of the Philadelphia Bar, and pursued his studies diligently until August, 1841, when he accompanied the Hon. Isaac Rand Jackson, Chargé d'Affairs to Denmark, in the capacity of attaché, and returned home in December of the same year. It was at this time that he experienced the full force of the convictions which had been for many years making steady inroads into his heart, urging him to become an earnest laborer in his Master's vineyard. He felt with all the earnestness of his nature that he was called to do the Master's work, and with an enthusiasm seldom met with commenced preparations to fit himself for it.

With this determination he became a candidate for orders January 20, 1842, and at once entered upon his theological studies. In the month of April, 1842, he revisited Europe for a short time of recreation, limiting his travels to England, Scotland, and Ireland, and returned in the following December. It was during this short tour that he accepted an invitation to visit his kinsman, the Earl of Eglinton, father of the present Earl, at "Eglinton Castle." He remained at the "Castle" for two weeks, enjoying the kindest attentions and hospitality. Early in the year 1843, he entered the General Theological Seminary in New York, where he applied himself diligently to the study of Divine truth and revelation until June, 1846, spending six months of that period at Nashotah Mission, in the then territory of Wisconsin, to familiarize himself with the hardships of frontier life, and to explore the vast field of missionary work and labor—an experience of great importance to him throughout his subsequent ministry. He was ordained a minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church June 28, 1846, and on the first Sunday of September of that year he was called to the rectorship of All Saints' Chapel, comprising a few poor, yet hard-working families in the then district of Moyamensing, Philadelphia. He continued in faithful charge of this Mission nearly nine years, accomplishing great good among a community at that time noted for its unruly character. He left a flourishing congregation, and although twenty years have elapsed, he is still spoken of by many with reverent affection.

On the 10th of September, 1846, Dr. Montgomery married Margaret Augusta, daughter of Judge James and Janette Maria Lynch. The former was a lineal descendant of the Lynches of Galway, and the latter was a daughter of Thomas Tillotson, M.D., a surgeon in the Revolutionary War, and subsequently Secretary of State of New York. Dr. Tillotson was a brother-in-law of Chancellor Livingston, and also of General Richard Montgomery, the hero of Quebec. After Dr. Montgomery's marriage he continued steadfastly in his laborious work in Philadelphia until the Spring of 1855, when he received and accepted a call to the Church of the Incarnation, New York, then occupying the building at the corner of Twenty-eighth street and Madison avenue, which they purchased several years later from the corporation of Grace Church.

He entered at once with characteristic energy upon this new field of labor, and pursued the same system as a parish minister which had resulted so successfully in his former charge. The results of his efforts were soon manifested in a rapidly increasing congregation, a thriving parish, and an influential church corporation. In a few years his reputation as a pulpit orator and zealous pastor had extended so widely, and the applicants for membership to his flock had become so numerous, that a new and more capacious building was wisely decided upon, and the present church, at the corner of Thirty-fifth street and Madison avenue, rose rapidly from its corner-stone, and now stands a proud monument to the indomitable energy and perseverance of its late pastor. Dr. Montgomery's ministry in this city embraced a period of nineteen years. During his pastorate in this city he often took an active part in the Diocesan and Triennial Conventions of his Church, and being a fluent speaker was conspicuous in the theological discussions which were occasionally introduced.

He was specially interested in all societies or associations formed for the relief of the poor and needy, and gave much of his time and talents to the amelioration of their condition. He was President of Saint Luke's Hospital Association of the Church of the Incarnation, Vice-President of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, Associate Member of the New York Infant Asylum, one of the Trustees of St. Johnland, one of the Board of Managers of the Sheltering Arms, Vice-President of "The Ladies' Mission to Public Institutions of the City of New York," Member of the Board of Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, Member of the Board of Managers of the Orphans' Home and Asylum, and Member of the New York Bible and Common Prayer-Book Society. To the success and prosperity of each he contributed largely by individual labor and encouragement. About the year 1860 a Home Mission was inaugurated, and this was ever an object of his warmest interest and care. The services are held in a tasteful building situated on Thirty-first street, near Second avenue. Under Dr. Montgomery's leadership the Church of the Incarnation sent large amounts to every corner of the missionary field, and became one of the acknowledged centres of missionary work in this country. As a friend and pastor of the late Admiral Farragut, U.S.N., Dr. Montgomery conducted the funeral services upon the occasion of the burial of the sailor hero at Portsmouth and afterwards at Woodlawn Cemetery, N.Y., and on the 5th of August, 1871, by special invitation of the "Society of the Army and Navy of the Gulf," he delivered at Newport, R.I., a most touching address upon the life and character of the "Great Admiral," which was published in the "Report of the 3d Annual Reunion of the Society of the Army and Navy of the Gulf." His household was the type of a happy, contented Christian home, and presented a picture of domestic life rich with the blessings of peace, harmony and love. It was a resting-place for the weary and heavy laden, a haven to the afflicted and distressed, and a resort for toiling missionaries and others, who gladly sought his hopeful encouragement. His charity was unostentatious and unbounded. All persons received the same cordial, outspoken welcome, and a warm pressure of the hand, which gave unmistakable assurance of his personal interest and sympathy. Each returning anniversary of his incumbency disclosed a most pleasing record of his unceasing service and usefulness; his last annual sermon presenting statistics not only in regard to the aggregate amount of contributions to public charities, but in evidence of the steady growth and healthful condition of the parish, which astonished as well as gratified those most deeply interested in its standing and prosperity.

A few months before his decease he was advised to adopt unusual precautions to preserve his health, but he remained steadfastly at his post and continued his arduous duties until the night of October 15th, 1874, when his gentle spirit returned to Him who gave it. The funeral services were held in his own church, and were unusually solemn and impressive, conveying touching evidence of the love and devotion which followed him through life and clung to his memory in death. They were conducted by the Right Reverend Bishops Potter, of New York, Bedell, of Ohio, Vail, of Kansas, Morris, of Oregon, and Hare, of Niobrara.

After a brief but touching eulogy upon his life and services by the Rev. Dr. Washburn, of Calvary Church, his mortal remains were taken to Rhinebeck, New York, and there deposited in the little cemetery which lies surrounded by a country hallowed by the sweetest memories of his early and later days. His wife and nine children, the eldest of the sons a practising lawyer in New York, survive him.

The chief beauty of Dr. Montgomery's character consisted in its entire freedom from all false pride and ostentation, combined with a warm, sympathetic nature and a fearless adherence to right.

One of the most attractive of the many virtues exemplified in his career was his inherent and unfaltering love of truth, which, manifesting itself at the very earliest period, became the bulwark of his success, and the bright polar star which directed his course through life.

He was never known to commit any unworthy or unbecoming deed, or to countenance any action around which there centered the faintest suspicion of duplicity or unfairness. His honor was unimpeachable, and his ideas of right and justice very scrupulous and decided, and never suppressed from fear of losing popularity or applause. There was a peculiar charm in his frank, unostentatious, unreserved form of greeting, which, with the firm pressure of the hand and a kindling warmth of expression, presented a magnetism which was irresistible in its power and influence. In the house of mourning, the chamber of death, or the haunts of misery and trouble, he was a true comforter, always dispensing soothing words of consolation and encouragement. He exercised a wonderful influence over children, and was largely rewarded by success in his efforts to interest them in the Sunday School and in catechetical instruction. The festivals upon Christmas Eve in his church, when hundreds of the parish and missionary children assembled to chant their carols and receive their gifts from the well-laden tree, and the bright, joyous voice of the pastor, with his countenance suffused with sympathetic smiles and his eyes kindled with rapture over the happiness of the little flock before him, was an annual scene which can never be forgotten by the old or young. Dr. Montgomery possessed great keenness and a thorough knowledge of men. In the matter of church policy and government he was in advance of the times, and seemed to have a presentiment of coming events in her history. A notable illustration of this is furnished by his action as a delegate to the first Convention of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, which met after his ordination, when a resolution was introduced to admit colored representatives. Owing to the prejudices existing against that race at the period referred to, the proposition was being vigorously and forcibly opposed, when Dr. Montgomery obtained the floor, and in strong and emphatic language, and with an earnestness of manner which sustained the sincerity of his views, advocated the measure, and insisted upon a recognition by a Christian body of all the delegates from a Christian Church regardless of color. Although the resolution was rejected by a large vote, yet in a few years it was unanimously adopted, thus confirming his views and endorsing his policy.

Dr. Montgomery's sermons were carefully written, and gave evidence of much study and research. They were made unusually interesting by a happy use and interweaving of illustrations. His style of writing was clear, concise and rhetorical. His periods were well rounded, his metaphors well selected, and his antitheses remarkably effective. He was an eloquent, impassioned speaker, became much wrought up in his subject, and intensified it by oratorical powers of the highest order. He was always a popular, never a sensational preacher, his paramount object being to communicate instruction, and make effect secondary to the practical result of his discourse. He avoided a redundancy of words, and aimed steadily at a clear and thorough elucidation of his texts. Having a wonderful command of language and great facility of expression, combined with perfect ease and self-possession, he excelled as an extemporaneous speaker, and many of his impromptu addresses are remembered as remarkable specimens of this enviable talent. He was a well-read theologian, and yet his practical theology was in his heart, that fountain of life which in him was overflowing and perennial, never intermittent, and he estimated men not by their skill and talent in making nice distinctions. He was thoroughly attached to his Church and her beautiful and impressive Ritual—an uncompromising Protestant, and yet no bigot in any sense of the term. The Scriptures were the alpha and omega of his faith, and obeying implicitly their sacred injunctions he would cheerfully and cordially unite with his co-laborers in Christ in disseminating the seeds of gospel truth. With him it was always "gently to hear, kindly to judge," and no spirit of envy or uncharitableness ever shadowed his heart upon the success and prosperity or greater honors of a professional brother. As a citizen, Dr. Montgomery was eminently loyal, and did all in his power to encourage a rigid obedience to the laws. When the Civil War burst over the land, he gave the full weight of his influence to the government, and became active and zealous in urging the supply of means and materials to sustain the national cause. He never wavered in his faith in the ultimate suppression of the rebellion and in the full triumph of our arms, and even in the darkest hours of the great civil strife he was unswerving in his reliance in God's protecting power over the nation. Convincing evidence of this absolute confidence in the final issue of the war is recorded by the simple statement that, on the day appointed for signing the contracts for purchasing the property for and building his new church, the telegraphic wires announced the entrance into Pennsylvania of Lee's entire army, and its rapid advance towards Philadelphia. Although the whole North was convulsed, business paralyzed, and he earnestly advised to await further developments, he refused to consent to a postponement, but completed the agreement, and directed the architect to proceed without delay with the construction of the building.

We close with regret our imperfect outline of the character of this faithful minister; much more might be said of his well-spent career in further confirmation of the truthfulness of our delineation. His name will be enshrined in the Church's history with the saint-like men who have gone before, and his memory will be embalmed in the hearts of his people and treasured as recalling the good pastor, the sympathizing friend, the exemplary Christian.

[Dr. Chester Dewey wrote thus 10 years since to the writer: "I entered on my 82d year last 25th Oct. in better health than for the preceding months of the year 1865, and am living longer than I expected to be. Our life is not in ourselves. I made profession of religion in 1807, in Sheffield, Mass., under the ministry of the venerable Ephraim Judson. I am an Evangelical Congregationalist, Calvinistic Trinitarian; and I believe that God in His grace by Jesus Christ forms a new temper and spirit in the hearts that come to believe and trust in Christ for forgiveness and salvation. God rules in wisdom and goodness: there I rely and am blessed. Praise the Lord."]

[It will interest the Dewey descendants of David Pixley, of Stockbridge, Mass. (or those of Israel Dewey, Jr., and Mary Pixley; see No. 189. I.–217. VII.), to know those of his son, Col. David Pixley, Jr., who was brother to Mrs. Mary (Pixley) Dewey.

Col. David Pixley, Jr., of Owego, N. Y., m. as his 2d wife Lydia Patterson, of Richmond, Mass. (dau. of Joseph Patterson, originally of Watertown, Mass., and Lydia Marean), b. Dec. 16, 1745. He was b. about 1740, and probably in Stockbridge, but perhaps in Westfield, Mass., whence the Pixley family removed not far from this time to Stockbridge. His first wife was a Whittlesey.

He was one of the commissioners to buy "The Boston Purchase," or "Boston ten townships," containing about 230,400 acres, occupying a considerable part of Broome and Tioga Counties in New York. Col. Pixley owned and managed some 3,000 acres of this purchase, about a mile west from Owego. He was a Lieut. in the Revolutionary War, receiving his commission May 19, 1775, and was at the siege of Quebec, under Genl. Montgomery, in a Mass. regt. of foot, Col. John Patterson. He. d. Aug. 25, 1807; Lydia, his wife, d. Feb. 2, 1808, æt. 62. He removed from Stockbridge, Mass., to Owego, N. Y., in 1791, and was one of its first settlers.

David Pixley, Senior, was the son (as the writer supposes), of Joseph Pixley and Abigail Clark, and was b. in Westfield, March 21, 1714.

The children of Col. David Pixley were 4 in number—2 by each marriage.

I. David Pixley, who m. Drusilla Bond, and had a son David, who d. in Rochester, Mich., Dec. 1, 1863.

II. A daughter accidentally shot by her brother when she was 8 years of age.

III. Amos Pixley, b. in Stockbridge, who m. Betsey Wood. He d. in Owego, and she m. for 2d husband a Mr. Gridley, of Candor, N. Y.

IV. Mary Pixley, b. in Stockbridge, May 10, 1777, who m. Dr. Samuel Tinkham, of Owego, where he d. Sept 30, 1804, æt. 36. She m. for a 2d husband, April 7, 1805, James Pumpelly, of Owego, b. in Salisbury, Ct., Feb. 20, 1776 (son of John Pumpelly and Hannah Bushnell). He d. in Owego, Oct. 4, 1845, and she d. June 4, 1848. Her children were 7 in number—3 by the first marriage and 4 by the second.

The children by the 1st marriage were:

1. Sarah Emily Tinkham, b. in 1795, who m. June, 1814, William Pumpelly, b. in Salisbury, Ct., June 17, 1789, brother to James Pumpelly, before-named. These two brothers were traders, large landholders, and speculators in Owego. She d. March 31, 1822, æt. 27.

2. Samuel Standish Tinkham, b. in Owego, May 29, 1799, m. March 20, 1836, Lois Willoughby, b. in Goshen, Ct., Feb. 23, 1815 (dau. of Ephraim Willoughby and Hannah Knickerbocker). He was a miller in Owego.

3. David Pixley Tinkham, b. in Owego, Nov. 22, 1803, m. June 8, 1826, Harriet Gould Drake (dau. of John Rollin Drake, of Owego, and Jerusha Roberts). He d. in Owego, Aug. 10, 1836, æt. 33.

The children by the 2d marriage were:

4. George James Pumpelly, b. Dec. 11, 1805, grad. at Yale in 1826, and the Litchfield Law School in 1828. He m. April 24, 1832, his cousin Susan Isabella Pumpelly, b. April 24, 1809 (dau. of Charles Pumpelly and Frances Avery). He was an extensive agriculturist in Owego.

5. Lydia Abby Pumpelly, b. Feb. 13, 1808, m. May 4, 1835, Dr. Ezekiel Lovejoy, b. in Stratford, Ct. (son of Ezekiel Lovejoy and Hannah Penfield), a physician in Owego.

6. Frederic Henry Pumpelly, b. in Owego, Jan. 13.1810; grad. at Trinity Coll., Ct.; m. Jan. 5, 1847, Sarah Ann Hewitt, b. March 2, 1822 (dau. of Gurdon Hewitt and Charlotte Platt, of Owego). He was a large landholder in Owego. He d. May 15, 1867.

7. Mary Eliza Pumpelly, b. April 9, 1814, m. Robert Charles Johnson, b. in Stratford, Ct.

To the foregoing brief account in two preceding articles and this one, thus far, of the Dewey Family in America, the writer is able to make some important additions, which have been obtained since he prepared his notes for publication. They are as follows, viz. :

I. Samuel Dewey, No. 10. IV., d. May 11, 1734 (see pages 64 and 66). He removed in his later years to Sheffield, Mass., and is said to have died there (and not at Westfield, as stated on p. 64). [The dates given in these articles of the births, marriages, and deaths of the Westfield Deweys are of the more value, as the town records of Westfield have been recently mistreated, or misplaced beyond the reach of the present Town Clerk, as he has within a few weeks informed the writer. Such mishaps ought to be made impossible in all the New England towns by jealous watchfulness for their prevention. The record of the Utah branch of the Westfield Deweys has been just sent to the writer from Ogden City, Utah, by one of the family, who read out there the account given of the Deweys in The Record.]

V. Josiah Dewey, Jr., No. 75. III. (see p. 68), who m. Mehitable Miller, of Westfield, Mass., removed about 1699 to Lebanon, Ct. The record furnished of his children on p. 68 pertained only to those b. in Lebanon.

The writer has since discovered that he had one child b. in Westfield (and perhaps others, but probably not), namely, Dea. Josiah Dewey 3d.

Samuel Chapin, the settler, and was m. April 14, 1647.) Mrs. Bashua Dewey Bagg m. for a 2d husband, May 6, 1762, Capt. Asaph Leavitt, of Suffield, Ct. They had 3 children :

(1.) Bathsheba Bagg, b. June 10, 1745, and d. Sept. 14, 1770. She m. about 1767 Ruggles Kent, b. in 1742, who d. Aug. 8, 1790, and had 4 children, the eldest of whom, Bathsheba Kent, b. in 1768, and who d. June 15, 1818, æt. 50, m. Dec. 21, 1785, Seth Pease, b. Jan. 9, 1764, and who d. Sept. 1, 1819 (son of Joseph Pease, of Philadelphia, and Mindwell King). [His sister, Mindwell Pease, b. Aug. 31, 1770, m. Jan. 14, 1790, Gideon Granger, grad. at Yale in 1787, P. M. Genl., of the U. S. A.]

(2.) James Bagg, b. Feb. 25, 1746, history unknown.

(3.) Jonathan Bagg, b. March 13, 1748, history unknown.

The above-mentioned items of Bagg genealogy were obtained from Lyman H. Bagg, Esq., of W. Springfield, Mass.

IX. In Southampton, Mass., there was a David Dewey whose wife's name was Zerviah ———. They are recorded as having had 3 children :

1. Zerviah Dewey, b. Aug. 27, 1768.

2. David Dewey, Jr., b. July 7, 1770.

3. Cephas Dewey, b. July 7, 1772, who m. Nov. 10, 1796, Tamar Slack.

X. In Westfield, Mass., the following marriages are recorded, some of which the writer is not able to assort in their proper places, namely:

1. Zerviah Dewey, m. in 1747 (pub. May 17) Solomon Noble, of Norwalk, Ct.
2. Mary Dewey, m. Nov. 8, 1744, Joseph Clarke. She d. April 10, 1749; he d. Oct. 7, 1749.
3. Sarah Dewey (probably No. 51. I., b. May 27, 1714, dau. of Israel and Sarah Dewey, of Westfield) m. Dec. 22, 1743, Joses Sackett.

The facts, so many of them fragmentary in their character, which have been grouped together in the three articles furnished by the writer concerning the history of the Dewey Family in this country, have seemed to him quite too valuable to be exposed to be lost. He has set them in permanent shape on the pages of The Record, in the hope that they will be at some future day enlarged to their full and complete dimensions by some earnest and careful examiner into their real scope and significance.

The Dewey has been a large, thriving, and religious family in the land, and its history ought to be written out in full while the materials for doing so are accessible in various directions. Mechanical instincts, tastes, and capabilities have been, as the writer believes, a leading characteristic of large numbers of this family.

ORIGINAL FAMILY RECORDS—CRUGER.

Contributed by Edward F. De Lancey.

Information received since the publication of the Cruger article in the April number of The Record permits the correction of some errors in, and additions to, the later genealogy of this family. The following statements and tables are to be taken in the place of those on pages 78, 79, and 80, as regards the persons named below.

The second wife of Henry Cruger, M.P. for Bristol, and subsequently a State Senator of New York, was Elizabeth Blair, of England, and their issue were:

1. Henry H. Cruger, m. Mary, dau. of Nicholas Cruger, of Santa Cruz.
2. John, m. Martha Ramsay.
3. Matilda, m. 1. Mr. Yates; 2. Henry Walton.
4. Harriet, m. Henry N. Cruger, son of N. Cruger, of Santa Cruz.
5. Eliza, d. unm. in N. Y., in 1868, aged 84.

The third wife of Henry Cruger, M.P., was Caroline Smith, whom he married in New York some years after his return to America. Their issue were:

1. William.
2. Cordelia, m. John S. Bailey.

3. Louisa, d. unm. in 1853.
4. Matilda, m. Thos. J. Oakley, late Judge of Superior Court of N. Y.

Of the sons of Henry Cruger, M.P., by his second wife, Henry H., the eldest, m. in Sept., 1802, his cousin Mary, second daughter of Nicholas Cruger, of Santa Cruz, and by her (who died in June, 1810) had one daughter, Catherine Cruger.

John, the second son of Henry Cruger, M.P., by his second wife, married Martha Ramsay, and their issue were:

1. Henry J., m. Matilda Whetten, widow of John Rathbone.

5. John Peach, m. Eliza L. C. Dyckman.
6. Elizabeth, m. S. H. Mills, being his second wife.
7. Charles, deceased.

Of the daughters of the second marriage of Henry Cruger, M.P., &c., Matilda, the eldest, after the death of Mr. Yates, her first husband, married, secondly, Henry Walton, of N. Y., and had issue by him:

1. Jacob, d. young.
2. Mary, d. aged 18.
3. Henry, m. Miss Orr, and died without issue.
4. William Henry, m. Fanny Brooks.
5. Cruger, m. Martha Wiggins.
6. Matilda, d. unm.

Harriet, the second daughter of the second marriage of Henry Cruger, M.P., married, March 4, 1802, her cousin, Henry Nicholas Cruger (the second son of her uncle, Nicholas Cruger, of Santa Cruz), who died, 18 March, 1846, and had issue:

1. Alfred, died aged 42.
2. Delphine, decd.
3. George, decd.
4. Clara, decd. 1855.
5. Harriet J.
6. Julia.
7. Sarah H., m. T. A. Coffin, of South Carolina.

The third child of Nicholas Cruger (3d son of Nicholas, of Santa Cruz) was Catherine de Nully Cruger, who married Bentley Hasell (pronounced as if written "Hazel,") of South Carolina, of an old family originally from Cambridgeshire, England. Issue:

1. Bentley Douglas Hasell, now of N. Y.
2. Lewis Cruger Hasell.

Tileman Cruger, the third son of the first Henry Cruger, and brother of Henry, M.P. for Bristol, was a West India merchant, and married Miss Henrietta Crissen, of the island of Curaçoa, a lady of Huguenot extraction, and resided there. Their issue were:

1. Tileman, b. 24 Aug., 1797.
2. Henrietta, b. 13 Dec., 1799, m. Mr. Jutting, of Curaçoa.

3. George Seymour, b. 5 Jan., 1801.
4. Melville Wood, b. 1 Nov., 1803.

Bertram Peter Cruger, eldest son of Nicholas Cruger, of Santa Cruz, by his wife Ann, daughter of Compte de Nully, married, first, Catherine, daughter of John B. Church and Angelica Schuyler his wife. Their issue were:

1. Eugene, d. unmarried.
2. Angelica, m. Auguste, Compte de Bastard, of France.
3. John Church, m. 1. Frances Ann Jones. Issue:
    1. Eugene, m. Jane Mary Jauncey, and died 1867, leaving four children. His widow m. secondly Carroll Livingston.
    2. Euphemia White van Rensselaer, third daughter of the old Patroon. Issue:
        1. Stephen V. R., m. Julie G. Storrow.
        2. Cornelia.
        3. Catherine Church.
4. Elizabeth, m. Alfred Pell, of N. Y.
5. Anna Mary, m. Daniel Glover, of N. Y.
6. Amelia, m. 1. Mr. Bremner, of N. Y. 2. Charles Briggs, of New Orleans.
7. Henrietta Julia, m. Henry Cruger, son of Tileman C., of Curaçoa.
8. William Hyde, m. Sarah Maxwell, of Peoria, Ill.

Bertram P. Cruger married, secondly, late in life, Mary, dau. of Robert and Lady Mary Watts, and widow of Nicholas Romayne, M.D., by whom he had no issue.

The seventh child of Catherine Cruger (sixth child of N. Cruger, of Santa Cruz), and her husband, William Bard, of N. Y., was Mary, who married Arthur B. Morris, of N Y., both deceased.

Mary, the eldest daughter of Henry Cruger, eldest son of the first John Cruger, married Jacob Walton, of New York, eldest brother of William Walton, who built the Walton House, and had issue:

1. Henry, who m. Matilda Cruger.
2. Ellen, died young.
3. Anne, m. Valentine Morris, Commodore U. S. N.
4. Eliza, m. Clotworthy Upton, Captain Royal Navy.

Elizabeth, the youngest daughter of Henry Cruger, eldest son of the first John Cruger, married Peter Van Schaack, of Kinderhook, N. Y., in 1765, and had issue:

1. Cornelius, b. 1766, d. July, 1775.
2. Henry, b. 1769, d. 1797.
3. Elizabeth, b. 1777, d. 1854, m. H. T. Frey, of Palatine Bridge, N. Y.
4. Cornelius, 2d, and several other children who died young.

Mrs. Van Schaack d. at Kinderhook, 18 Apl., 1778. Mr. Van Schaack m. secondly, in April, 1789, Elizabeth Van Alen, of Kinderhook, who died in 1813. By her he had, John, David, Peter, Lydia Christina, Henry Cruger (now of Manlius), Lucas, and Margaret. He died 27 Sept., 1832, aged 85. It is said that Mr. Van Schaack was, by his two wives, the father of eighteen children.

ORIGINAL FAMILY RECORDS—ONDERDONK.

CONTRIBUTED BY EDWARD F. DE LANCEY.

THE folio family Bible of Henderick Onderdonk, of Queens County, Long Island, printed in Dutch, in 1729, by Pieter and Jacob Keur, in Dordrecht, bound in embossed pigskin, with brass clasps and corner-pieces, and illustrated with quaint copper-plates, eight to the page, is now in the possession of the family of the late General Henry Floyd-Jones, of South Oyster Bay, Queens County, Long Island, one of the sons of his daughter Sarah, who was the wife of David Richard Floyd-Jones, of Fort Neck, in that county.

It contains the following record in the Dutch language, which has been carefully and correctly translated. The last entry, in 1809, is as far as we know one of the latest family entries in Dutch, if not the very latest in that language, made upon Long Island.

Henderick Onderdonk is born the 11 December, Anno Domini,	1724.
Phebe Tredwell is born the 12 July, Anno Domini,	1730.
These two were married the 20 May, Anno Domini,	1750.
Benjamin Onderdonk is born the 13 April, Anno Domini,	1751.
Geertruy Onderdonk is born the 11 February, Anno Domini,	1753.
Phebe Onderdonk is born 2 August, Anno Domini,	1754.
Andries Onderdonk is born the 6 of May,	1756.
Sara Onderdonk[1] is born the 26 of March,	1758.
Henderick Onderdonk is born the 1 day of February,	1760.
Maria Onderdonk is born the 22 day of November,	1761.
Johannis[2] Onderdonk is born the 22 day of August,	1763.
Phebe Onderdonk is born the 2 day of June,	1765.
William Onderdonk is born the 12 day of January,	1767.
Samuel Onderdonk is born the 31 day of August,	1770.
Benjamin Onderdonk is born the 25 day of January,	1776.
Phebe Onderdonk died the 2 day of July,	1758.
Father Andries Onderdonk died the 21 day of November,	1758.
Henderick Onderdonk died the 31 day of March,	1809.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE FIELDS OF FLUSHING.

A NOTICE of a pamphlet relating to the Field family, which had lately issued from the press in my name, appeared in the January number of THE RECORD of this year, in which regret is expressed that I should persist in giving currency to the long-exploded error that the noted Captain John Underhill and John Bowne, of Flushing, married respectively Elizabeth and Hannah, daughters of Robert Field, the emigrant: it being well established that these ladies were daughters of Robert Feake.

I am desirous of stating to your readers that I knew nothing whatever of this recent publication, until I read of it in your columns, and that I am even ignorant of the name of the person under whose auspices it has appeared.

In a sketch of our family which I contributed to the N. E. Historical and Genealogical Register in 1863, I stated the error, which is now repeated in this reprint, on the authority of Thompson and others, who had doubtless been misled by the similarity of the names; but the real facts have been known to me for many years.

The accompanying pedigree was my first attempt to construct one of the Fields, and I regret to say that this is not the only error in it.

Should any of your readers feel interested in this subject, they will find one in Foster's "Yorkshire Pedigrees," published last year, in which these mistakes are rectified.

Although this last was compiled with great care, some doubt has been thrown on the marriage of Robert Field to Elizabeth Taylor, at Bradford, in 1630, by the following document, which was found at the old Bowne house, Flushing, by Mr. J. T. Bowne:

"ffebruary y^e 6^th, 1673.

Know all men by these preñts that I Charity ffield widow Doe owne and confess that the home Lott that Lyeth betwixt the Lott that was formerly old Applegates and the Lott that was formerly ——— Doughty's is my sone Anthony ffield's Lott and proper land and I never intended or pretended any right to it.

Testes

marke.

This paper proves that Field the emigrant left a widow Charity, and although it is quite within the range of possibility that he may have married three times, I think that the above document, coupled with the fact that there was another Robert Field then residing at Horton, near Bradford, who became a widower in September, 1624, leaves the question as to who was the husband of Elizabeth Taylor open to conjecture. Charity Field is thus referred to in a letter from John Bowne to his wife, dated "Amsterdam, the 9^th of the 4^th month called June, 1663:" "Remember my true love to Joan Chatterton and Charity Field, with my love to all the rest of my loving neighbours;" but I failed in tracing her relationship to Field the emigrant until seeing a copy of the paper she signed in 1673.

I am also indebted to Mr. Bowne for the following ancient deed, which is on the same sheet as the previous one, both being copied from the originals in the Flushing Records by James Clements, the Town Clerk, in* 1672. At this early period, many deeds were drawn first on the Town books, and there signed; after which copies were furnished by the Clerk to any one willing to pay for them.

"ffebruary 12^th 1653

fflushing Know all men by these preñts that I Robert ffield Doe freely give and grant Unto my Two Sones Robert ffield and Anthony ffield each of them a house Lott with the proprietie and priviledge thereunto belonging I give Unto Robert the Lott w^h was formerly John Lake's Unto Anthony the Lott which was formerly given unto Thomas Aplegate Sones which two Lotts were purchased by mee and now freely are given by mee unto them my two Sones their heirs or Assignees forever to Injoy.

Robert Field."

These documents prove three facts not previously known to me: that the emigrant was dead in 1673, that he left a widow named Charity, and that his sons Robert and Anthony were of age as early as 1653.

Savage says that John Field was son of the first Robert, and that he removed to Boundbrook, New Jersey. In the pedigree in Foster's book he appears as grandson of the latter and son of Anthony. I have seen no conclusive evidence of either statement, but the dates are more consistent with the latter theory.

Putting aside as too vague an undated paper—apparently a list of persons taking the oath of allegiance—the following are the earliest documents in the neighborhood of New York, in which I find a John Field mentioned; but I am unable to say if they all refer to the same individual.

One of the name received from Gov. Andros, a Patent for land on Delaware Bay called "Field's Hope." My copy is without date; but as Andros' term extended only from 1674 to 1681, this can be fixed approximately.

John Field's estate with others at Flushing was valued in 1683 and he is also named in the Patent of that town of 1685.

In a document dated 1686 John Field of East Hampton is mentioned, and finally an old Bible which was formerly in possession of the Honorable Peter D. Vroom of Trenton, N. J., contains an account of three or four generations of Fields, commencing, "Jeremiah Field the son of John Field and Margaret his wife was born May 17, 1689."

If we assume that John Field came of age shortly before the date of the earliest of these documents, he must have been born so long after Robert and Anthony, sons of the emigrant, as to render it improbable, although not impossible, that he was their brother.

As he resided at Flushing, it is unlikely that he was a son of Robert the second, who removed to Newtown in or about 1670; besides the four sons of the latter, to whom he deeded land in 1690, together with their eldest brother Robert, were probably all his male offspring.

In support of the theory that he was a son of Anthony, I would remark that we knew that Benjamin was not the only son of the latter, for in a letter of Hannah Bowne, whom he married in 1691, he is described as "youngest son." The dates would accord well, as

* The discrepancy of a year between this date and that of the preceding paper may be an error in copying, or may arise from its being signed in 1672-3.

Anthony is shown by the deed given to have been of age in 1653, and his brother Robert's eldest son, of the same name, had apparently attained his majority before July 9, 1679, for on that day William Graves in his will names "my loving friends Mr. Robert Field *Sen*r and Left. Gersham Moore both of New Towne," overseers and executors of it.

Whether John Field of Flushing removed to New Jersey or not, I am unable to say; but apparently he left Long Island or was dead in 1689, for his name does not appear as a witness among the existing records of marriages in the family, which commence at that date.

In the sketch of the Fields which has been lately reprinted, I showed that several relatives, connections and neighbors of Robert Field left the vicinity of Halifax and Bradford for America about the same time as he did. The large emigration from these parts my be explained by the fact of Sir Richard Saltonstall residing at Hipperholme near the former town.

I would now add the names of two other neighbors who were probably connected with him by marriage. In a list of inhabitants of Dedham present at a town meeting held the 1st day of 11th mo. 1644 will be found the names of Geo. Bairstowe and Jonath. Fairbanks.

Savage says in his Dictionary that the brothers Michael and George Bairstowe were from "Shelf near Halifax," and that Jonathan Fairbanks "was probably from the W. Riding of Yorkshire, as the will of his brother George calls him of Sowerby in that part of England."

A reference to the Field pedigree will show that Robert the emigrant married Ruth Fairebank of Hipperholme, that his uncle Thomas married Susan Bairstowe, and that his father William Field resided at Sowerby, before removing a short distance to North Ouram, where he died. Hipperholme, Shelf and North Ouram are contiguous townships, and were then under the ministration of Coley Chapel.

If any readers of "THE RECORD" are in possession of facts not generally known relating to the first three generations of the Flushing Fields, they will confer a great favor on me by communicating them direct, or through its columns; more especially if they throw light on the doubtful questions of Robert Field's wives, which of them was the mother of his sons Robert, Anthony and Benjamin, and the proper position of John Field in the pedigree.

NOTES ON BOOKS.

A GENEALOGICAL HISTORY OF THE HOYT, HAIGHT, AND HIGHT FAMILIES, with some account of the earlier Hyatt Families, and a List of the First Settlers of Salisbury and Amesbury, Mass., etc. By DAVID W. HOYT. Providence: Printed for the Author by the Providence Press Co. Boston: Henry Hoyt. 1871. 8vo.

This book of 686 pages contains a history of the descendants of John Hoyt, of Salisbury, Mass., a history of the descendants of Simon Hoyt, or Hayte, originally of Charlestown, Mass., a record of the proceedings at the Hoyt family meeting, held at Stamford, Ct., in 1866, the family record of William Barnes, of Salisbury, brief sketches relating to the Hoyt family in England, etc., etc. The names are given of 3,441 descendants of John Hoyt, and of 6,039 descendants of Simon Hoyt. Daughters are included in these numbers, but not the children of daughters bearing other surnames.

Much valuable information is given concerning the Hoyt and Hoyte families of England, but no connection is traced between those families and the Hoyts of America. No coat of arms belonging to the name can be found in England. As an item of interest, an engraving is inserted of the arms and crest of a German family of Von Hoyte, taken from a German Heraldry in the Library of the Herald's College at London. The other illustrations include ten portraits, all excellent engravings, several views of buildings, and many autographs.

The indices are very full.

Besides the general index, there is one of places (p. 14), one of Christian names (p. 16), and one of surnames (p. 15). The index of places is especially valuable.

One of the most interesting portions of the work is that describing the gradual changes which have taken place in the spelling of the name.

Those members of the family who went eastward to Maine soon took the name of Hight, and their descendants have retained that form to the present time. In Connecticut there are 15 or 16 different modes of spelling the name. At New Haven Hoyt became Hoit, and while Danbury retains the original form, in Norwalk Hait, and in Stamford Hayt became the prevailing orthography.

When the tide of emigration reached New York, Haight became the nearly universal form throughout the counties of Westchester and Queens. There is a tradition in Flushing that the ancestor of some of the name in that place came there directly from Wales.

The book will be found very useful to those who are engaged in hunting for the whereabouts of the descendants of many of the early residents of New York. Information can here be obtained which can be found nowhere else. But is not the author in error, when he states (note p. 340) that William Smith, father of Mrs. Ann Hait, was a descendant of the Chief-Justice of the Colony of New York? This William Smith was a sea captain, describing himself in his will as "Of New York, Mariner and Merchant." He was the grandfather of Col. William Stevens Smith, who married Abigail, only daughter of President John Adams. J. O. B.

THE DESCENDANTS OF JOSEPH LOOMIS, WHO CAME FROM BRAINTREE, ENGLAND, in the year 1638, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut, in 1639. By ELIAS LOOMIS, LL.D., Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in Yale College. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. New Haven: Tuttle, Moorehouse & Taylor, 221 State Street, 1875. 8vo, pp. 611.

In 1870 Professor Loomis, having been for forty years engaged in collecting materials for a Genealogy of the Loomis family, issued the first edition of this work—limited to 250 copies—which he then announced as an imperfect and incomplete register to be circulated for the purpose of exciting an interest among the different branches of the family, and securing the requisite additional information to complete the work. This end the author has now, in a measure, attained, and has given us the result in a handsomely printed volume of over 600 pages, embellished with lithographic engravings of Loomis and Lomas coats of arms, and finely executed steel engravings of three members of the family, viz.: Rev. Hubbel Loomis, formerly of Wellington, Conn., now deceased, James C. Loomis, Esq., of Bridgeport, Conn., and the Hon. Arphaxad Loomis, of Little Falls, N. Y. Although very persistently pursued, the author's researches have as yet failed to connect his immigrant ancestor, Joseph Loomis, with any family of the name in England, but he produces reliable evidence that he was a woolen draper from Braintree, in Essex County, England, arriving at Boston, in New England, in 1638, in the ship Susan and Ellen, of London, Edward Payne, Master. We are given a catalogue of 8,686 persons bearing the Loomis name and believed to be descended from him, with exact dates of births, marriages and deaths, besides the names of 4,682 persons who have intermarried with them. But little biographical matter is inserted. The arrangement of the entire work is clear and simple, by successive numbering of each name,—each generation to and including the tenth, being separately and distinctly designated. Very full and complete indices accompany the volume. J. J. L.

HISTORY OF WINDHAM COUNTY, CONNECTICUT. By ELLEN D. LARNED. Vol. I, 1600–1760; published by the author, 1874. Worcester, Mass.: 1874. 8vo, pp. 582, with Preface and Maps.

This seems an excellent sample of local history. It is well written and well arranged: and it was much needed by the general student, and by the genealogist. Various family genealogies have run into this old interior county, affecting only single families, such as Morse's, Dwight's, Chandler's, Dana's, Huntington's, Spalding's and Williams's. This work will greatly simplify and aid the compilation of the like, for other families. It indicates "the origin and settlement of families and the connection of prominent members "with public and general affairs. Domestic and personal details must be left to the family "historian."—the genealogist.

"Ten towns on the northeast corner of Connecticut," "were erected into the County "of Windham" in 1726. They were previously included in the counties of Hartford and New London. There have been subsequent changes. Sixteen towns now form the county. The northern part was long claimed and held by Massachusetts, the boundary line being disputed. The first 260 pages of this work—Book I.—give a succinct history of the early period from 1676 to 1726; Book II. describes the period from 1726 to 1749: and Books III. and IV., from 1740 and '45 to 1760, in separate divisions, embracing church and state, and giving a clear account of each distinct locality. We think it a work which every descendant of Windham County will be happy to read and praise, and to own.

The items of interest and importance for the general reader are numerous. The catalogue of books imported in 1740 and 1741 for the "United English Library," in several towns, is quite a curious one—especially if compared with a modern circulating library. Some further account of Mr. John Cates, the first settler of the town of Windham in 1688, an English refugee, who d. in 1697, leaving land "for ye support of ye poor" and "of ye school in said town for ever," may yet appear. The Calendars of State papers and the earnest pursuit of all the mysteries of State-craft and of families, are developing many old secrets, and this book will do its share. C. B. M.

THE WOODMANS OF BUXTON, MAINE. A list of the children and of the grandchildren and great grandchildren bearing the Woodman name of Joseph,[4] Joshua,[4] and Nathan[4] Woodman, who settled in Narraganset No. 1., now Buxton, Me. Preceded by a list and some account of the families of Benjamin,[3] Joshua,[2] and Edward,[1] from whom they were descended by Cyrus Woodman. Boston: Printed for private use by David Clapp & Son. 1874. 8vo, pp. 125.

It contains a clear, unvarnished and unreserved account of the family from 1635, the year Edward Woodman, the immigrant ancestor, as one of the original grantees settled in Newbury, Mass., down to the present time. This period embraces seven generations of the family. Mr. Woodman has followed the plan of the Rev. J. A. Vinton in numbering the descendants of the original settler. His explanations in regard to old and new style are very clear and satisfactory, and cannot fail to be of value.

The family of Woodman, represented by Joseph, Joshua and Nathan, the sons of Benjamin, of Newbury, and great grandsons of Edward Woodman, the immigrant ancestor, settled in what is now known as Buxton, Maine, about the middle of last century. It was at the latter place that Joseph Woodman constructed his saw mills, thereby becoming one of the pioneers of this important branch of labor in the State of Maine.

The book cannot fail to be of interest to the student of the life and manners of the early settlers in the Eastern States, as well as to members of the family, the lives of whose ancestors have been so faithfully sketched. E. A. H.

OBITUARY.

DRAKE.—Samuel Gardner Drake, Honorary Member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, died of pneumonia, at his residence in Boston, on the 16th of June, 1875. He was the second son, and one of five children of Simeon and Love M. (Tucke) Drake, of Pittsfield, N. H., at which place he was born, 11th October, 1798. His mother was a dau. of Rev. John Tucke, of Epsom, N. H., a descendant of the ancient family of Tucke, of Gorlston, Suffolk Co., Eng. He was sixth in descent from Robert Drake, an early settler at Exeter, N. H., subsequently of Hampton, in the same State, a man of exemplary piety and substantial wealth. Mr. Drake married 1st, on the 13th April, 1825, Louisa, dau. of Eliphalet and Chloe (Leonard) Elmes, of Middleborough, Mass., by whom he had six children—four sons and two daughters; 2nd, Jan. 17, 1861, Sarah Jane, dau. of Samuel and Elizabeth (Sherburne) Drake. While occupied as a school-teacher, from his 20th to his 25th year, he conceived a love for antiquarian investigations, to which mainly he devoted the remainder of his life. He opened the first antiquarian book-store in Boston, in 1828. His works on the "Indians," their Wars, History and Biographies are well known, and are of standard authority. In 1855 he published the "History and Antiquities of Boston," a triumph of laborious research. He was one of the founders of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, long its efficient Corresponding Secretary, its President in 1858, the originator and for many years the able editor of its "Register."

HURRY.—Edmund Hurry died at his country place, near Tom's River, N. J., June 4, 1875. His death was very sudden and unexpected, coming as a shock to his many friends, and as a matter of surprise and regret to those that were unaware of the fact that his health of late had not been satisfactory.

Mr. Hurry was descended of the "Old Hurrys, of Yarmouth," noted for their efforts, for generations, to secure the repeal of the Corporation and Test acts, and who were nearly related to many of the best families in England. He was a grandson of Mr. John Hurry, of Liverpool, one of its first merchants, belonging to that set of which Sir John Gladstone, father of the late Premier, was a type, and who raised Liverpool into commercial prominence. He was born in Philadelphia, Sept. 17, 1807, at the town residence of his father, Mr. Samuel Hurry, immediately opposite Independence Hall. His father during the early part of this century was one of the principal ship-owners and merchants of that city. His mother was the eldest child of Mr. William Whiteside (of the Whitesides, of Poulton-le-Fylde, Lancashire), a tea importer of Philadelphia, and who, with his brother, Peter Whiteside, and Robert Morris, the financier, were the joint originators of the East India trade, direct with this country, each of them realizing $10,000, after all expenses were paid, on the sale of the first cargo of tea brought from China.

For some time past Mr. Hurry had altogether retired from business, but for nearly fifty years few men have led a more active and useful life. His operations in real estate, in this city, in early life, were large, and they were continued successfully through the many years that have intervened. As an architect he always stood among the first, a fact which secured his appointment as Consulting Architect of the Crystal Palace—a building, on account of its size and peculiar structure, requiring more than ordinary skill and professional knowledge in its construction. He was at one time a member of the Board of Education, and took a warm interest in the earlier development of our public schools. He was an ardent abolitionist, at a time when it was almost a crime to entertain and advocate such opinions, and he prophesied that slavery would be wiped out in blood. His well-known opinions on this subject caused his life to be threatened during the riots, he then living at his summer house at Fort George, near Fort Washington. He was also strongly opposed to capital punishment, and maintained that its abolishment was only a question of time. Besides his wife, who was a daughter of Judge James Flanagan and Elizabeth Myers McKean his wife, Mr. Hurry has left two sons, Edmund Abdy, a lawyer, and Randolph, lately graduated from Columbia College, and a daughter, married to Samuel H. Shreve, Esq., the eminent civil engineer.

JOHN SHRADY, born May 28th, 1783, died at his residence in this city on 10th June last. He was a veteran of the War of 1812, having served under Col. Daly in Captain Strachan's company. In earlier life he was a schoolmate of Washington Irving, a few weeks his senior, and Dr. John W. Francis, some six years his junior. His recollections of "Old New York" were uncommonly vivid; old land-marks and historical characters, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, Aaron Burr, Brockholst Livingston, and Dewitt Clinton, were with him frequent topics of conversation.

He married May 27th, 1828, Margaret, a daughter of Frederick Beinhauer, a native of Vienna, Austria, who came to this country during the Revolutionary War, and Sophia Wilhelmina Henrietta Christiana, a daughter of Dr. John W. Zeiss, both of whom were born in Amsterdam, Holland. Margaret Shrady died in her 74th year, Oct. 17th, 1873. Five children survive this couple, viz.:

John Shrady, M.D.; Anna Barbara, wife of Rev. John R. Vankirk, New Brunswick, N. J.; George Frederick Shrady, M.D.; Jacob Shrady, and William Shrady, both counsellors at law.

The Shrady family came originally from the Grand Duchy of Wurtemberg, Germany, sometime about 1715, in the persons of Johan Schrade, the only surviving representative of his family, and his wife, Anna Maria (Schaeffer), daughter of a Lutheran clergyman. They remained a short time in Boston, Mass., but finally settled in this city, where they both died. Three children, Maria, afterwards Mrs. Daniel Shires, Dorothea, and John were the results of this union. John, who was born in Roosevelt st., married Anna Barbara, daughter of Jacob Eplin, an emigrant from the Grand Duchy of Baden. This John was an active revolutionary patriot, having been a prisoner of war in the Old Sugar House, from which he escaped in disguise. He was the father of ten children, of whom five attained maturity, viz., John, the third child, lately deceased, Jacob, born 1787, died 1851, Anna Barbara, died in her 22d year, George, died Aug 15th, 1871, and Maria, sole survivor.
